

BORAH SENTIMENT CONTINUES TO GROW

Idahoan Considered Strong Man for Nomination, Since Refusal of Hughes.

SUPPORT IS PROMISED

Two Elements in Republican Party Would Be Satisfied With Result, Despite Senator's Denial He Is in Race

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, May 8.—The refusal of Justice Hughes, of the United States Supreme Court, to become a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination or to permit the use of his name in that connection is accepted by his friends as having been made in good faith. Nor did the announcement occasion surprise.

Justice Hughes cannot put a stop to mention of his name, nor can he prevent the presentation of his name to the next Republican National convention, if any state sees fit to put him forward. At the same time, men who know Justice Hughes well believe he is in a frame of mind to decline the nomination if it should be tendered, and therefore they think any further effort to develop Hughes sentiment would be unavailing.

Friends Say He Would Decline.

That any man should decline the presidential nomination at the hands of one of the two big parties may be incomprehensible, but friends of Justice Hughes assert that he would do that very thing if he should be nominated against his will.

In the past month or two there has been a growing sentiment in favor of Justice Hughes, based on his popularity as Governor of New York and on the fact that he is the type of man who could command support from both factions of the Republican party. His announcement followed immediately on the declaration in Washington of Governor Hatfield, of West Virginia, that he favored Hughes' nomination in 1916. Governor Hatfield characterized Justice Hughes as the "symbol of strength and unity" and predicted that Hughes, once nominated, could be elected. "If the party wants to nominate Justice Hughes, it can do it," declared the Governor. "Only the man himself could prevent it from being done." The next day Justice Hughes made his announcement.

With Justice Hughes out of the reckoning, Republicans who have been looking for a compromise candidate have renewed their search. The first name considered in most instances is that of Senator Borah, of Idaho, who is still regarded as much of a factor in Republican presidential politics, notwithstanding his assertion that he is not seeking the nomination.

Borah on Middle Ground.

Senator Borah occupies a middle ground between Root and Weeks on the one hand and Cummins and Roosevelt on the other. Root and Weeks are regarded by the progressive wing of the party as having been too prominently identified with the "stand-paids" faction, in the past, while Cummins is frowned on for his radical views and because he voted for Roosevelt in 1912, though refusing to leave the Republican party, and the Colonel, of course, is not at all acceptable to a large element of the party, that refused to support him three years ago.

The Idaho Senator is greatly admired by all four of the possibilities named, and if he should be nominated he would have the support of all of them. Root, Weeks, Roosevelt and Cummins must be regarded, each of them, as representative Republicans. Each represents an element in the party; each has his own followers and admirers, and each would give Borah whole-hearted support. The time is not ripe for these men to speak publicly on the subject of the Republican nomination, but each one of the four has been interrogated privately on the possibility of Senator Borah's being the nominee, and it is known that each of these leaders considers the Idaho man a strong possibility.

All Desire Republican Success.

Senator Cummins, of course, is a candidate himself; Senator Weeks is a candidate; and Senator Root and Colonel Roosevelt are not candidates, but are being strongly urged by their respective supporters for presidential honors. If Cummins can land the nomination for himself, Borah is undoubtedly would be his second choice; Weeks probably would prefer some one else to Borah, but he believes the Idaho Senator must be rated among the strongest men to be reckoned with at the next Republican National convention, and if the tide should turn in Borah's direction, Senator Weeks would join the procession.

Cherrians Are Not to Hold Fair.

SALEM, Or., May 8.—(Special.)—Because of a deficit last year, the Cherrians have decided not to hold a cherry fair this year. However, plans for a fair have not been entirely abandoned, for there is a possibility that the Commercial Club will offer to cooperate with the Cherrians in providing a festival. All members of the Cherrians think it best to wait until next year to have a fair, and there is a probability that the fair will be held biennially instead of annually in the future.
