

'OMAR, THE TENTMAKER' COMING TO HEILIG SOON

Noted Play Causes Quickening of Interest in Writings of Omar Khayyam. Based on Times of Persian Poet.

Guy Bates Post in "Omar the Tentmaker"

A DISTINCT quickening of interest in the writings of Omar Khayyam has been occasioned through Richard Walton Tully's play, "Omar, the Tentmaker," which is based upon the life, times and Rubaiyat of the immortal Persian poet. The whole world is familiar with the titling quatrain of Khayyam, and for those who speak the English tongue they have been best rendered by the late Edward Fitzgerald, whose literary fame rests largely upon his exquisite version of the Persian verses.

There are many ancient manuscripts giving the Rubaiyat in its original form, but unfortunately for students in this country, most of these are housed in the libraries and museums of Europe. There is, however, in the possession of Hector Fuller, Esquire, of Indianapolis, a splendid facsimile of the famous manuscript of the year A. H. 860 (A. D. 1460), the original of which is in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. Undoubtedly this is the oldest copy of the Rubaiyat extant.

Professor Crowell discovered it in 1865 among an uncatalogued mass of Oriental manuscripts comprising the Ouseley collection. There can scarcely be a more beautiful Persian manuscript of its age in existence. It is written in purple black ink upon thick yellow paper and is profusely powdered with gold. The only places where the ink has faded are occasionally along the borders and the formal headings, which, translated, mean "and likewise to him," which is written above each quatrain. Experts have decided that the borders and headings were written later than the quatrains themselves, and in a different ink. It is known that Fitzgerald depended a great deal upon the Bodleian manuscript, which enhances its value to the student and bibliophile.

In one respect only perhaps does the Fitzgerald edition differ from the original and that is in its modified Sufism. Fitzgerald realized that the Rubaiyat for the rather narrow-minded Englishman of the Victorian era, and accordingly tempered the subtle tendencies of Khayyam. As Richard Burton eloquently expresses it: "Sufism is the religion of beauty, whose leading principle is that of earthly, the imperfect type, or heavenly love. Its high priests are Anacreontic poets; its rites, wine, music and dancing, spiritually considered, and its places of worship, meadows and gardens, where the perfume of the rose and the song of the nightingale, by charming the heart, are supposed to improve the heart of the listener."

As every student of literature and society well knows, the England of 50 years ago was not tolerant of such a frank dependence upon beauty. Although Fitzgerald toned down and subordinated as much as he could, the apparent boldness in much of Khayyam, his work was nevertheless doomed because of the frankness that still remained, the frankness that brought shudders to the Puritan souls who had not yet wrestled with Ibsen and Maupassant. Not until many years after Fitzgerald had completed his version of Khayyam's Rubaiyat were its tremendous merits and beauties openly recognized and lauded by Rossetti, Tennyson and Carlyle, and with such distinguished patrons the long-neglected quatrains speedily attained an almost unprecedented popularity. That popularity they have steadily maintained, and now, thanks to Mr. Tully's keen dramatic insight, it is being royally enhanced.

"Omar, the Tentmaker" is to open at the Heilig Theatre May 23 for four days with Guy Bates Post.

WIDOWS' AID TO GO ON

LAW CHANGES MAY 22 NOT TO AFFECT PRESENT LUCH.

Judge Cleeton Silent on Policy Intended When Juvenile Court Work Is Taken Over.

Changes which will take effect May 22 in the widows' pension law will not affect materially the present list of women being cared for under this act, according to Chief Probation Officer McIntosh, of the Juvenile Court.

The changes will become effective at the same time that the Juvenile Court work is transferred from Circuit Judge Gatens to County Judge Cleeton. As yet Judge Cleeton has made no statement as to the policy he intends to pursue in handling the juvenile work or whether he will retain the present force of deputies.

Under the law that was passed by the last Legislature $40 a month is the largest pension that may be drawn. Heretofore there was no limit. The largest pension ever paid in Multnomah County was $50. This was to a woman who had 11 children.

"It was found," said Mr. McIntosh, "that this family was able to maintain itself properly with the aid of some of the larger children and by proper supervision of a friendly visitor and investigator."

Another change in the rule is that the children must be living with their mother if a pension is to be paid for their support.

"Relief is granted," said Mr. McIntosh, "only when in its absence the mother would have to work regularly away from home and children, and when, by this relief, she would be able to remain at home with her children."

If a wife receives relief on the grounds that her husband is permanently incapacitated for work by reason of physical or mental infirmity, the court may require that the husband be removed from the home, if his presence is a menace to the health of the wife or children.

A new section added to the law will keep creditors from attaching the money received as pensions. The money thus received is made exempt from attachment and execution.

"A great deal of credit is due," said Mr. McIntosh, "to the members of the Visiting Nurses' Association and the Good Samaritan, St. Vincent's and county hospitals and a number of physicians, who have all given their time help mothers and children back to health without the cost of one cent to mother."

Under the new law, the good done along these lines is absolutely surprising to learn many people are able and willing to do help whenever they are asked of a worthy cause.

BOND LIEN INTEREST LAGS

City May Take Drastic Action to Avert Making Up Delinquency.

Delinquency of property owners in paying interest and installments on bonded liens granted the city for street and sewer improvements has grown so great that drastic action may be necessary on the part of the city to avert making up the delinquency from the money in the city's general fund.

City Treasurer Adams issued a statement yesterday to the effect that the city, to break even on the interest it pays on the bonds, must take in a total of $2627. For April the average amount received was $922.18 a day. So far for May the average taken in has been $995.51.

FLORAL FEATURE NOTED

ADDITIONAL BOOTHS MAY BE NECESSARY AT FESTIVAL CENTER.

Attention to Be Made Tomorrow for Community Exhibits and Interest Is Unusual.

Four additional booths may have to be erected at the Festival Center to take care of the floral displays being arranged for the coming Rose Festival as a result of the interest in this feature throughout the city.

Emery Olmstead, president of the association, says the floral display will be one of the best features ever planned and the community exhibits will be highly representative of the floral supremacy of Portland.

"It is remarkable the interest that is being taken by the representatives of various sections of Portland in connection with the coming floral display," said President Olmstead. "The meeting at the new Chamber of Commerce tomorrow night will be one of the most important yet held, as the booths to hold the community exhibits will be awarded. This will be done by lot."

"This is one of the features of the festival that will attract great attention from strangers in Portland this week and they will return to their homes more than favorably impressed with the beauties of the city."
