mination the first step into the new circle of church friends was made and the members of the First Church met the newcomer with a hearty greeting and with assurances that they would help in all lines of church work. Several have taken Mrs. Darsie out on delightful auto trips, others have entertained her at tea and luncheon.

Sunday schools are Mrs. Darsie's hobby. She believes that in a well-organized and interestingly conducted school splendid results can be obtained. Home missions and social service work too, appeal to her, and in both she has had wide experience. Of course the foreign mission work too, receives her support.

Dr. and Mrs. Darsie spent three years in Terre Haute, and before that were for seven years in Akron, O. Theirs was a college romance. They were at school together in Bethany, W. Va., but did not marry until the young minister had been preaching as an ordained pastor for two years. In all the work Mrs. Darsie says she is willing to help and has done what she could to assist her husband.

Those who know her well say that she has a wonderful amount of tact and even the casual acquaintance can readily observe that her ability to make friends is one of the secrets of her popularity. As for plans for the future, she says: "I wan't say what I will do. I believe actions are better than promises."
