

SCHOOL GETS PLANT

Department of Journalism at "U" Is Beneficiary.

H. R. KINCAID IS DONOR

Complete Outfit, Five Drayloads, of Old Oregon State Journal, Is Turned Over to State University to Aid Its Work.

EUGENE, Or., June 19.—(Special.)—Three days ago President P. L. Campbell, of the University of Oregon, told the alumni at their annual banquet that donations and bequests would be accepted by the State University at this time.

The complete plant of the old-time Oregon State Journal, which, for 45 years, was a conspicuous factor in the Oregon newspaper field, was yesterday placed at the disposal of the Journalism department by W. R. Kincaid, of Eugene, representing his father, H. Kincaid, of Portland.

The outfit is a relic the department of Journalism values highly—the first newspaper press brought to the state. The first press of any kind that came to Oregon is said to have been the mission jobber that was brought from the Sandwich Island in 1829, but the first newspaper press came around the Horn a few years later, and upon it Oregon's first copy of a secular newspaper was turned out on February 5, 1846, at Oregon City.

Judge Kincaid, who had lived a rigorous life as a freighter and prospector in California and Oregon, from 1853 to 1860, purchased at Canyon City, Or., a Stateman which name continued until the Statesman died. The Statesman was a powerful political spokesman at all times. The Kincaid family purposes making up files of it for the entire 45 years one of which is to go to the University department of Journalism.

The $500 appropriated this week by the university board of regents to purchase the nucleus of a printing plant, instead of being devoted to primary material, can now be used to supplement the Kincaid plant. This will put the department in much better position for its first year of laboratory work than it expected.

RESERVES GAIN SPEED

MILITIAMEN LOAD BIG GUNS AT FORT IN 25 SECONDS.

Original Time Is Cut by One-Half, and Similar Results Are Observable in Their Range Tower Work.

PORT STEVENS, Or., June 19.—(Special.)—Problems worked on paper and discussed in theory are receiving a practical exemplification in the work of the Oregon Coast Artillery Reserves at Fort Stevens.

Speed and accuracy are being developed in handling the big guns. Loading 15-inch mortars with 1040-pound projectiles, acting behind each shell its propelling charge, closing the breech, setting the angles of direction and elevation required nearly 50 seconds the first day of drill. This time has now been cut to 25 seconds, and when it reaches the 20-second limit the Oregonians will be in a position to compete with any organization for target practice records.

Similar results are observable in range tower work. The gradual development of team work is shortening the time and increasing the efficiency of all engaged.

Inspector Instructor Captain Collins, assisted by Captains Waldron and Edwards and Lieutenants Gardner and Gifford, all regular Army officers, has general supervision of the training of the state troops. The work of the enlisted men is supervised by Sergeant Gaudin, assisted by the members of the Ninety-third and Thirty-third companies.

Captain Woods, of the reserves, echoes the sentiments of the Oregon troops when he remarked: "Two of my sons are in the reserves and the remaining one is being trained to follow in their footsteps."

Miss Lender came to Spokane in March, 1910, drew allotment No. 11 in the Spokane Indian reservation, and after living there two years and a half part of the time five miles from any other white woman, proved up on the place and came to Spokane, where she has been employed on the editorial staff of the Spokesman-Review and also on the Spokane Chronicle. Her husband is two miles from the Leona Lake plant of the Washington Water Power Company.

The appointment will be effective Monday, when Miss Lender will leave for Portland to confer with officials of the company and Miss Estelle E. Flynn, of the Seattle territory.

The O.-W. R. & N. Company is the first way to adopt this method of caring for its women patrons, and the idea bids fair to be successful. CITY DECORATED FOR RECEPTION OF CONVENTION DELEGATES.

3000 ARRIVALS EXPECTED

First Visitors Due Tomorrow to Establish Headquarters and Every Train Will Be Met by Escort of Citizens.

CENTRALIA, Wash., June 19.—(Special.)—With the windup of the finance campaign and the erection of the tents in the hippodrome grounds opposite the depot, all details will be completed for the state conventions of Grand Army of the Republic, Woman's Relief Corps, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, Sons of Veterans, Daughters of Veterans, United Spanish War Veterans and the Spanish Auxiliary, which will be held here jointly next week.

The hippodrome, the biggest entertainment feature of the convention, occupies three entire blocks, and it is expected that it will be set up Monday night, ready for opening Tuesday morning.

The main body of delegates about 3000 in number, will arrive Tuesday, the officers of the various orders coming in tomorrow and Monday. Establishing their headquarters, the visitors will be met at the train, given their souvenir badges and taken to their quarters. A reception committee from the Commercial Club, assisted by a similar committee from each of the local posts and the Boy Scouts, will meet each incoming train.

Grand Army Emblems Used. The work of decorating the business section of the city was concluded Tuesday, special Grand Army of the Republic emblems being included in the decorations. The auditorium and hippodrome grounds have also been decorated, as well as the business houses. Rest-rooms have been provided, and no detail left undone tending toward the comfort of the veterans.

The business sessions will open Tuesday and continue until Friday night, when there will be a joint installation of officers. Saturday will be devoted to a big celebration in which the delegates will be the guests of a reception. Hundreds of visitors from all parts of Southwest Washington are expected to swell the crowd on that day.

Tuesday morning the Spanish Veterans will assemble in the auditorium, where a short programme of welcome will be held. Tuesday night the Commercial Club will entertain the delegates and entertainment in the auditorium to all of the delegates. At this time the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic will present a picture of Abraham Lincoln to the club.

Joint Exercises to Be Held. Thursday morning joint exercises will be held in the auditorium, when the Woman's Relief Corps will present a flag to the High School. The same evening the Grand Army of the Republic will stage its campaign in the auditorium, which will be followed by the serpent parade of the Spanish Veterans. The Spanish Veterans' night will be held in the auditorium on Friday night, in the school or in public, a tobacco limitation of social activities, the requiring of chaperones for all women who ride or drive and a recommendation that hours of study be maintained at least three hours each evening are embodied in rules and regulations set by the board of regents for students of the Oregon Normal School.

According to the plan the guarding of the rules, management and control is to be maintained largely through a faculty advice system. Students are to be divided into groups, based upon the class to which each belongs. Questions concerning boarding places, health and courses of study must be discussed with the advisers. It is provided that all students report to the president, who is to make all arrangements for their entrance.

Emphasis has been laid upon class attendance and omission of classes without permission is to be regarded as a serious offense. Student attendance at chapel is made compulsory. The rulings conclude: "Students who are unable or unwilling to discipline themselves thus are not desirable members of the school and their attendance may be discontinued by the president."

MONMOUTH NORMAL ATTENDANTS HAVE FREEDOM LIMITED. List Ends With Remark That Those Unwilling to Accept Discipline Are Not Deemed Desirable.

MONMOUTH, Or., June 19.—(Special.)—The fixing of limits for students' walking about the City of Monmouth, the prohibition of the use of tobacco in the school or in public, a tobacco limitation of social activities, the requiring of chaperones for all women who ride or drive and a recommendation that hours of study be maintained at least three hours each evening are embodied in rules and regulations set by the board of regents for students of the Oregon Normal School.
