WAGES FOR MOTHERS

HUBBARD'S LAST WISH Lusitania Victim Makes Plea for Women of America, Advising Husbands to Provide Against Day When "Misfortune" May Overtake You.

BY LIFE INSURANCE EDITOR.

FATE has finished his last chapter in Elbert Hubbard's essay on "Wages for Mothers."

It is interesting to note that the mother also performed the function of church, school and government.

She was their teacher of manual training, of world wisdom, ethics and morals.

"Among men might was right. But the mother had a finer sense of justice, she was their teacher of manual training, of world wisdom, ethics and morals.

The modern human being wants money in his pocket, money in his hand, money in the bank, money to give him independence, money that he may have exercise for his will and brain.

"All—except mothers." "As society is now organized a woman loses her respectability when she gives her services for 25 or 30 years to the hearing and care of citizens for the state.

Right here it may be quite apropos to supplement Mr. Hubbard's human appeal with an answer.

That is what the provider should do with the mother of his children with sufficient funds for the necessities of life.

Y'know, mother, this duty was never put on her. It is where Mr. Hubbard's proposal of wages for mothers will find its proper place.

That W. H. Wallace has agreed to build on the southeast corner of Couch street and Broadway for the Piske Tire Company.
