RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN AGAIN SAVES ALLIES

German Army From France Made Necessary in East by Hot Resistance.

SACRIFICE COUNTS IN END

Then followed one of the most san-guinary conflicts of the war for the possession of the capital of Poland. It seemed to the inhabitants of the town that Warsaw must fall, but the Siberian corps arrived in the nick of time and after them the imperial guard.

A member of the guard's corps, pride A member of the guard's corps, pride shining in his eyes, told me how two regiments of the guard, totaling 8000 men, arrived as the Siberian corps were realing back before the Germans' onslaught and with the flags flying and band playing marched into the thickest of the attack. In the meantime on the western front had been fought the battle of the Alsne, the British army had been transferred to the extreme left flank in an unsuccessful attempt to turn the German right. Antwerp had fallen, and the Kaiser with his imperial guard was hammering harder and harder at the gates of Dunkirk and Calais.

In January, therefore, General Hind-enburg made a desperate attack on Warsaw.

Of necessity perhaps, perhaps compelled by higher authorities, Hindenburg gave up the former tactics of quick marches and flank attacks. Instead he massed 602 pieces of artillery of different calibers and kinds upon a six-mile front from Souhaczew to Bollmow on the Rawka River and for days tried to drive a hole through the Russian defensive.

Warsaw is the principal railroad center in this theater of war. It is also a neutral military depot. Enormously rich, it would furnish as large a war indemnity as Antwerp. Its capture, furthermore, would increase enormously the German military prestige, which alone holds off the attacks of the Balkan states. $175,000,000 SUNK other causes.

These figures show that England and her allies have lost 230,000 tons of naval fighting material, costing approximately $100,000,000, while the Teuton and Turkish losses total 140,000 tons, worth about $60,000,000.

British Losses Heaviest. The figures also show that the miscellaneous losses officially recorded are approximately the same on both sides, while from torpede, gun and mine the British and their allies have lost nearly double the tonnage that their opponents have lost by the same causes. By torpede the British losses are 10 times more than these of the their opponents have lost by the same causes. By torpede the British losses are 10 times more than those of the other side, which shows clearly how important a part that weapon plays.

In gunfire England has established a long lead chiefly because the German ships at large when war was declared have been destroyed by this means. In the armed merchantmen and auxiliary class the net register tonnage of allied ships destroyed amounts to 30,000, while the German, Austrian and Turkish losses stand at approximately
