INDIAN PIPE IS BLOOM OF DEEP DARK WOODS

Professor of Botany at University of Oregon Explains Nature and Habits of Flower, With Leaves Dwindled to Colorless Scales.

long to a family closely related to the blueberry and madrona and have a complete flower with all its parts, calyx, corolla, stamens and pistil.

The Indian pipe (Fig. 1) is sometimes called the ghost flower. It comes as a surprise to the nature-lover, who finds it for the first time, and is a perennial delight. At the same time it is a source of grievous disappointment, for it turns black soon after gathering. Its scientific name is monotropa, meaning a single turn, referring to the single nodding blossom. Later the ripened seed capsule will become erect.

The pine sap (Fig. 2), while closely resembling the Indian pipe in structure and habit, has several flowers on each stalk and is cream colored, light yellow or red, in contrast to the ghostly white of the pipe.

The scientific name—hypopitys—is from two Greek words, meaning under fir trees.

Later the ripened seed pods will stand erect to aid in scattering the seed.

The Indian pipe can be found in Macleay Park, Portland, and both will be found in the thick woods over all Oregon.

PARIS MUST NOW FLEE FROM GASEOUS BOMBS

Refuge Out-of-Doors Is Advised, in Contrast to Previous Warning to Seek Cellars When Zeppelins Appear.

PARIS, June 7.—(Special.)—It is not always easy to follow directions. Variety is the spice of life, but sometimes in war times life is spicier enough without too much variety. All during the winter we, in Paris, were told by mouth of the press that when the alert was sounded—the alert was the auto fire engine racing, honking through the streets accompanied by a bugler who blew certain notes, clear, staccato and quickly repeated, announcing the approaching Zeppelins—to close the windows, put out the lights and to go down into the cellar, and to stay there until "danger past" was sounded.

If it were late in the night the concierge—that person indifferent and stern who lets you in and out, who receives your bill collector and your best beast, your daily mail and the milkman—was to awaken those heavy sleepers that even a Gabriel's trumpet wouldn't disturb. The situation demanded prompt action. It was no easy task to invoice in the twinkling of an eye all the inhabitants of a hotel or an apartment house. These concierges are real warriors, and equal to all emergencies and they seem to know it. If a woman has forgotten her pearl necklace or left behind her pet poodle. Oh, these concierges are indefatigable. They will lead their children down into the mysterious darkness, down into the cob-web festooned cellars.

"Submarines Invade Sewers."

Then came the misanthrope, again through the press, that there were submarines in the Paris sewers, with orders, "Everybody to the attic!" Now it is bombs of asphyxiating gas, with orders, if the bomb falls in the house, to go outside of the house; if the bomb falls outside the house to stay inside the house, but under no circumstances to descend into the cellar because poisonous gases, which are always heavy, will descend into the cellar also. Then what to do? Mr. Gustave Terry, in the morning Journal, gives his advice: I believe that it is wisest to wait tranquil. You will see well enough when the bomb bursts if it is gas or not. If it is not, go down stairs, if it is, go up in the attic and plug your nose with a cloth imbued in hyposulphite of soda.

There is a funny side to all this to me. I believe that we in Paris today, don't know just exactly "where we are at."

These last days the press, in tones grave and serious, urges that precautions be observed against bombs of asphyxiating gas. Knowing that these bombs were thrown last week in London with such disastrous effect, it makes one realize that we are living in an epoch when it is necessary to foresee even the impervious, notwithstanding the vigilance of the aerial defenders. It must be admitted that the Zeppelins could attempt another raid on Paris.

Emergencies Are Numerous.

Such a demonstration would not have strategic value. It would, nevertheless, be of intense interest to those persons exposed to receive a projectile in the neck or to be suffocated. The Zeppelins not only throw engines of destruction and incendiary bombs, but they throw also asphyxiating bombs. It is necessary that the people of Paris should prepare themselves for any emergency and to know that the Germans might let fall, considerable quantity of liquid or asphyxiating gas. As precaution there have been distributed to the police of Paris and of
