

WOMEN NURSES WORK TO QUALIFY

Portland Woman Says British Hospital Work Hard, but Sometimes Amusing.

SOCIAL BARRIERS DROPPED

Enthusiastic Amateurs No Longer Rush to Wash Face of Wounded Soldier or Kiss Him, Declares Writer.

BY EDITH E. LANTON.
DONCASTER, England, July 19.—(Special correspondence).—We Englishwomen really are all very busy these days. I myself am more occupied in doing things than in writing about them.

The Woman's War Work movement is flourishing. Here in this little town a Belgian refugee is giving economical cookery classes. Once in the times before the war she ran a flourishing little restaurant at Ostend. I never saw anyone better able to make an appetizing dinner out of next to nothing. She reaches a nourishing hot dinner out of the empty air in much the same way a conjuror takes a rabbit out of an empty hat! She outdoes a conjuror because she not only produces the rabbit for about sixpence but cooks it also.

Her ever-ready stockpot reminded me irresistibly of a scrap bag. Out of the odds and ends she made a succulent soup quite as warming and comforting as the patch work quilt would have been if it had been a rag bag.

I am on the committee, and I assure you the prices she pays for her materials are too small to remember. It is, of course, not only the classes, but she insists on paying back all she gets to the Belgian committee. As she talks to us in French, mixed with exceedingly broken English, we get two lessons in one—French conversation garnishes and gives an "air" to our cookery.

Pupils Expect to Save.
For all these six lessons we pay eightpence each—about 36 cents. I do not mean each time, but each person, for the whole six lessons. By attending this eightpence each housewife confidently expects to save a vast sum. There are now 53 pupils and many more clamoring to be admitted.

Another Belgian refugee is giving gardening lessons here. He probably will produce the vegetables an surprising out of nothing as she can cook them out of nothing.

I am saddened this time by the death of a dear old friend—the Bishop, who could not find it in his conscience to pray publicly that my ship might ram and sink a German submarine. He did, however, pray privately that a German submarine might not ram me. And it didn't.

Every Sunday at church I find the Psalms of David very comforting, the warlike ones particularly so. David and I agree about the way we would like to deal with our enemies. One can put one's heart into the singing of these psalms and still be a peace-loving man. Sunday before last they were well expressed indeed and I sang them lustily.

I dreamt of David had known all about Belgium, and I am sure I could even more forcible still. I am not going to mention any names but "Consume them in Thy wrath; consume them in the day of Thy anger." "I feel my feelings towards the enemies I mean quite mildly.

Nine Floats Among Children.
A German mine washed up on the beach here a few days ago. The children taking it into the coast-guard station. Fortunately it did not explode and kill any of the adorable, chubby-legged babies who were wading in the surf when it appeared in their midst.

On Saturday I was talking to a sailor man who was on shore leave because his battleship had been submerged. For two hours after the torpedo struck them he hardly expected to ever be on leave again. Each man grabbed a lifeboat and a lifebuoy and he got his shore leave all right.

His nephews and nieces were very glad he did, as he was building them perfectly splendid fortifications out of sand and a real model of the Great Canal. There was grief when the remorseless tide came and washed them out. I didn't have the heart to take him to play golf with me. He had been two days ashore in a year.

There is a good deal of upsidownness about the social scale just now, and certainly nobody can be said of a case where the master of the house was a private, and his parlor maid's "young man" was a captain in the same regiment.

The private said: "The captain's a jolly fine fellow and got promotion for distinguished service in the field, and if he wants to marry me, I'll be in the drawing-room and make love to the parlor maid he's quite welcome to."

A distinguished barrister is delighted to whom a whole lot of money in the yards of a munition works, thus releasing a skilled workman to go inside the works.

Artists and Scrub Women.
Lots of patriotic women, who would like to be nurses but have not the necessary training, are only too glad to be ward-maids, and scrub the hospital floors until they can pick up enough knowledge to be able to take a higher place. No one despises the lower step these days.

The kind of woman who early on in this war rushed madly into a hospital and insisted on washing each soldier's face and "kissing him for his mother," is not in demand any more. It is a long uphill path of hard work before we reach the goal and are allowed to wash a soldier's face, and "kissing him for his mother" simply is not done. Believe their faces were getting quite worn out.

I think one of the saddest things I ever heard of is related by war nurse Sister Martin-Nicholson. She was on duty at a base hospital in France and one of the wounded and dying soldiers "called her to him."

"I'm dying, nurse, am I not?"
"I nodded."

"Then you will do something for me?"
"I nodded again."

"As I can't kneel, nurse, seeing that I've no legs, will you just say the Lord's Prayer for me?"
She did and whilst she was saying it he died.

We are working diligently in our Red Cross class. The examination takes place on Friday and I shiver in anticipation. I dream every night of typhoid fever and bandages, of small-pox and positions. Hinks-Bird ventilators mixed up with patent feeding cups and some night in my sleep I shall certainly get up and put a spica bandage on the leg of my bed.

Some incidents are funny.
Then we do sometimes—just sometimes—forget to shake down our clinical thermometer before taking a temperature and get marvelous results. I'm very own self, when asked what would be an unusually high reading, it would be known to say 120. It would surely be extraordinarily high. You see, I got mixed up and was thinking of the pulse.

They say that the Volunteer Army Detachments are allowed to practice on the Territorials and are promoted to the regulars when perfect. A base libel.
I think I told before of the two soldiers who made their beds up neatly and then hid away under them to avoid having their temperatures taken by one of the Volunteer Army Detachment nurses. She was much annoyed at them for being "out."
I have been invited to join both Volunteer Army Detachments here. There is even rivalry, you see. However, I shall be far afield and cannot join either of them. But it is very flattering to be asked.
If we were not so earnest our practice classes would be very amusing. We put two real beds in the room, two real beds, last time, and did conjuring tricks with clean sheets. It's wonderful.

NEW PRINCIPAL OF ALBANY HIGH SCHOOL IS EXPERIENCED TEACHER.

Professor W. B. Young, Albany, Or., Aug. 14.—(Special).—Professor W. B. Young, who has been elected principal of the Albany High School, has taught in Oregon for the past eight years. He was principal of the High School at the Dalles for seven years and was an instructor last year in the Salem High School.

Altogether Professor Young has had 12 years' continuous teaching experience. He taught three years in Minnesota and one year in Wisconsin before coming to this state, and he is graduate of the Ashland (Wis.) High School, and received the degree of Ph. B. from Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wis.

How you're expected to charm a clean sheet in under a patient and a dirty one out with one wave of the hand, at the same time keeping the bed and so we let them stay and hope they will attack some other amateur nurse's skirt rather than ours.

We should certainly pull them out in a hurry if we had a real patient. I don't all fun, though, and we are in deadly earnest. Perhaps "deadly" is an unfortunate way of expressing it!

How you're expected to charm a clean sheet in under a patient and a dirty one out with one wave of the hand, at the same time keeping the bed and so we let them stay and hope they will attack some other amateur nurse's skirt rather than ours.

Then we make up a fracture bed. To do this you lay a row of boards on the floor and they have to reach out and bite an amateur nurse in the skirt. Of course they shouldn't be there, but after all, it's only an imaginary fracture bed and so we let them stay and hope they will attack some other amateur nurse's skirt rather than ours.

COUNCIL TO BEGIN BUDGET ESTIMATES

Indications Are That Tax Levy Probably Will Be Higher Than Ever Before.

LIQUOR REVENUE IS LOST

Possible Deficit at End of Year Is Feared, and City May Have to Suspend Payment of Bills in January.

With many difficult problems starting them in the face, members of the City Council will start within a short time the preparation of the annual budget of proposed expenditures for 1916. The budget estimates must be completed and in the hands of the Auditor by the first Monday in October. After that the Council will consider the budgets and fix the tax levy for next year.

Portland's tax levy will be high—probably higher than any year in the past. This will be due to the fact that the levy for the present year was cut down to such a point that there will be no surplus of funds, and possibly a deficit at the end of the fiscal year, December 1. It is likely that there will be the loss of about $300,000 in liquor license revenue, which heretofore has been an annual asset. This amount next year will have to be made up by taxation.

Owing to the general demands of the public for more economy in municipal affairs it is very likely that there will be but little next year in the way of special appropriations. While it is expected a number of appropriations will be sought by individual members of the Council, it is considered certain that little if anything of big dimensions will get by the Council.

Suspension Is Threatened.
To help out during the present year a large amount of money appropriated and intended for special work such as new fire engine houses, a detention home for women, and other expenditures, will have to be put into the general fund to meet current expenditures. Even with that the city will find a time after January 1 when it will have to suspend payment of bills because of financial shortage.

These appropriations will be sought in the budget for the next year when they will be allowed a matter of conjecture. It is probable also that the payroll of the city will be gone into and the last two years will be lopped off and that increases in the service will be discontinued and that special work will be minimized for the year. The present year the tax levy was 7.5 mills. This was .2 of a mill lower than the levy for 1914. This cut was made in spite of the loss of a great amount of liquor license revenue this year and a decrease in the city's assessed valuation. The cut, although resulting in slightly decreased taxation as far as the city was concerned, has resulted in the city being cast on the financial rocks. Last year there was a balance of $140,000 carried over to help out the 1914 appropriations. This year in place of that $140,000 balance there is prospect now of a deficit of from $50,000 to $80,000.

Levy Increase Necessary.
The decrease means a much higher tax levy for next year unless the city can get more money from taxation next year will be greater than the need this year owing to the fact that the city collected something over $200,000 in liquor license revenue this year, whereas there will not be a cent from this source next year.

Commissioner Dieck has started the preparation of his budget. A series of conferences are being held by heads of bureaus in his department. So far the only special appropriation definition decided upon is $100,000 for that paying a repair plant. Other Commissioners are preparing orders for their bureaus to get busy on the budget estimates. It is probable that the Council all this year will act as budget committee, as it did last year. At the request of Commissioner Baker a committee of business men is to be called to make recommendations and suggestions. This committee has not yet been appointed.
