WOUNDED ARTIST TO BE HEARD IN PORTLAND

Miss Steers Announces That Fritz Kreisler, Who Fought and Bled for His Fatherland, Will Be Initial Attraction of Season.

FRITZ KREISLER, WOUNDED ARTIST, WHO WILL BE FIRST MUSICAL ATTRACTION OF SEASON IN PORTLAND.

LOIS STEERS, of Lois Steers-Wynn Coman, returned last week from a vacation in Eastern Washington, and immediately took up plans for the opening of the 1915-16 music season in Portland. The opening date has not yet been fixed, but the artist has been chosen. He is Fritz Kreisler, the eminent violinist, who has but recently arrived from the battlefield in Europe, where he was injured.

The coming of Kreisler has a romantic atmosphere about it that Miss Steers has discovered. Many who know of Kreisler's art with his violin were stunned when the news trickled from the European battlefield that he had been injured. All wondered if his musicianly capabilities had been disturbed by his wounds. He had given up his career when it was most brilliant to serve his country, but his injuries eventually made him less a soldier and more a musician, the satisfaction which tempered the news of his misfortune in the war zone.

Kreisler has the soul of an artist, and therefore the experience in the war has lent color and even more feeling to his sensitive nature.

Kreisler is an artist who does not believe that being one, he should not risk his life in war. He sought to return to the front after his wounds had healed, but some more sober counsel stayed him. Kreisler was in reality permanently disabled as a soldier, but fortunately not disabled as a musician.

REUNION IS UNEXPECTED

Hood River Grocer Visited by Two Families of Relatives Same Day.

HOOD RIVER, Or., Aug. 21.—(Special.)—An unexpected family reunion was held at the home of J. M. Wood, a local grocer, Thursday night. Thursday afternoon E. W. Wood, of Seattle, motoring with his wife through the city, was attracted by the name of Mr. Wood on an address. On introducing himself they discovered that they were first cousins. They had not seen or heard of each other for 12 years.

While the reunited cousins were talking over old times, a sister of the grocer, accompanied by her husband and children, unexpectedly arrived by automobile from Vancouver, Wash.

Mrs. Wood made a descent on her chicken yard and the Wood home was the scene of a reunion feast Thursday night.

COQUILLE RIVER TRADE KEEPS CRAFT BUSTLING

Annual Shipments From Bandon and Myrtle Point Also Are Heavy, While Ocean Commerce Likewise Is Extensive.

S.S. Elizabeth Loading Lumber, Coquille River

BANDON, Or., Aug. 21.—(Special.)—The Coquille River is the scene of a bustling commerce. The river is navigable as far up as Myrtle Point, a distance of 30 miles. This waterway thus serves three important towns—Bandon, Coquille and Myrtle Point. Along the river are canneries, mills, coal chutes, truck and dairy farms and cheese factories, which furnish abundant sources of freight.

The craft are many and varied. There are dozens of rowboats, something like 60 small gasoline boats and 11 large boats devoted exclusively to river commerce. The Myrtle Point Transportation Company operates the Dora, Fronto, May, Maple and Myrtle. The Farmers' Transportation Company operates the Dispatch, a large stern-wheeler, the Norma and the Telegraph. The Coquille River Transportation Company operates the Coquille the Charm and the Favorite. The Wolverine, which has been inactive for two years, will be operated independently by Captain Willard. Several of these boats have a passenger capacity of 200 people. The jitney lines between Bandon and Coquille are finding an active competition among the river-plying boats.

The ocean commerce is likewise extensive. The ships plying between Portland and the Coquille River are the Tillamook, Kustler and Roamer. Those between San Francisco and the Coquille River are the Brooklyn, Elizabeth, Speedwell, Bandon, Acme and Phoenix. These ships have an aggregate carrying capacity of 2300 tons.

The following figures show the average annual shipments out of the Coquille River: Lumber, 87,586,000 feet; ties, 5,685,000; piling, 3421 pieces; 5019 poles; shingles, 5,325,000; matchwood, 563 cords; spints, 2967 bundles; stices, 9996 bundles, shakes, 233,000; coal, 803 tons; salmon, 4057 cases; miscellaneous freight, 2578 tons; passengers, 2129.

Coming into the Coquille River an average year shows 2224 passengers and 17,884 tons of freight. The rest of the trade is decidedly in favor of the Coquille River ports.

Approximately 7000 people are served through these ports.
