Knights of Malta and the Knights of the Mediterranean Pass is given as follows:

The Knights of Malta was one of the most realisious and military orders that sprang into existence during the Crusades, which were instituted for the recovery of the Holy Land. The society, established when Jerusalem was in the hands of the Mohammedans, passed through many viclastitudes, but lived to see the Holy City conquered by the Christian Knights. It then received many additions to its ranks, who, laying aside their arms, devoted their time to the care of the sick. Later, the order assumed a military character which it after maintained. It had been much attenuated by losses in the field, and being no longerable to continue their military exploits on land, the Rnights betook themselves to their gathers, and while they protected the piligrims who still flocked to Palestine, gave security to the Christian commerce of the siedliterranean. On sea as on land they met success and in time their harbor of Cyprus was filled with their prizes.

It was at this time that the grand master of the hospitalers having obtained the consent and approval of Pope Clement and the months of hard righting planted their standard on the walls of the City of Rhodes, and the lished the hospitalers whome they were called the Knights of Rhodes. In 1480 Rhodes, and the lished theocort, he came the home of the hospitalers, whome they were called the Knights of Rhodes. In 1480 Rhodes was successfully besinged by the Turks, and after many contests the city and island were surrondered. The terms of surrander were liberal to the knights, and they were allowed to depart with all personal property. Seven years later the Emperor Charles V. of Germany vested in the order the complete and perpetual sovereignty of the lalands of Malta and Goo, and for upwirds of two centuries after they waved the Johanner of St. John, an honor to Christianity and a terror to the Infidels of the East, From this time the order received the title of "Knights of Malta," which is still per

The Knight of the Mediterranean Passeonferred in a council is declared impressive and supplies the tradition that it was founded about the year 1267 in consequence of vertain events which occurred to the Knights of Maita. In an excursion made by a party of these knights in search of forage and provisions they were attacked while crossing the River Offanto by a large hedy of Baracena. The Saracena had concealed themselves in ambush, and when the knights were on the middle of the bridge which spanned the river, they were attacked by a sudden charge of the anemy on both sides of the bridge. A long and sangularry contest ensued; the knights fought with their usual valor and were at length victorious. The Saracens were defeated with such limmense slaughter that 1500 of their dead bodies encumbered the bridge, and the river was literally stained with their blood. In commemoration of this event and as a reward for their valor, the victorious knight had free permission to pass and repass in all of the coasis of the Mediterranean Sea without danger of molestation, whence the name of the degree is derived.

Nebraska Farmer, Recalled.

A ray of light in the mysterious death of George Danley, a wealthy farmer of Lincoin, Neb., and a former resident of Portiand, who was found dead of asphyxiation in his room at 1712 O'Farrell street, San Francisco, Thursday, was thrown yesterday by Mrs. M. J. Mason, 447 Fifth street, Portland, whom Mr. Danley visited four weeks ago.

Mr. Danley was a sufferer from heart trouble, the severe palms of which were often sufficient to leave him weak and almost unconscious, Mrs. Mason remembers the late rancher telling her. 15 is suggested that an attack of heart trouble in San Francisco may have led him to end his life.

Evidence at the scene of death pointed to suicide, but the police were unable to find a possible motive.
