

EXPOSITION'S BEST
DREAM YET TO COME

Dream Days and Nights Beautifully Real Bring Out Romance of Picture.

PERFECT WEATHER HELPS

Oregon's Exhibit First as Advertisement of State and Gives Direct Answer to Question of Home-seeker.

BY ANNE SHANNON MONROE.

OREGON EXPOSITION BUILDING, San Francisco, Sept. 10.—Just 12 more weeks of the great Panama-Pacific Exposition. At least the coming four of these weeks to be blessed with San Francisco's loveliest weather, a boon we are already rejoicing in. The days are dream days and the nights—what shall we call the nights? They are not dream nights, they are too positively, luxuriously beautiful to call. If there is one shade of romance in your one faint trace of the stuff that moonlight maddens, don't risk it—not at least without your fingers crossed.

There was a big party in the great California host building last night, and all the gorgeous cars rolled into the grounds and deposited beautiful women—Erean bits about which floated draperies light as air—and they tripped into the glamour of indoors, to whirl in the dance with their black-coated men, and presently the doors were closed and their activity shut in, and only light and man's meddling with it left on the outside.

Night Made More Beautiful.

And man has meddled so superbly with the Exposition night! Against a background, cold, high, deep, dark and blue, studded with stars there stood out the matchless mass we periodically call the Fine Arts Palace and lagoon. The lighting etched out the whole in clearest lines and brought the jewel colors softly into the scheme; marble and bronze statues were clearly picked out against their greenery background, mural paintings high overhead presented their least detail, the trees seemed lightning, so still and breathless for the paddling swans and white birds which rested like boats against the green banks, and all was repeated in the clear black depths of the lagoon, repeated without loss of more than a thin veil affords a lovely woman.

The great beautiful dome, the pillared colonnade, the marbles and bronzes, the trees, the swans—there they all were, and there were you—also repeated in the water—and whispering because otherwise it might vanish.

Permanent Exhibit Is Urged.

Judge Ryan is catching the fever of the fair's importance to Oregonians. He said to me today: "Tell them they must come." He wants Oregon to prepare a permanent exhibit based on our state buildings and the Canadian exhibit. He wants every Oregonian to come down here and see just how the thing is done.

At the beginning of the Exposition we all said that Canada and California were the winners. We felt just a little bit ashamed of Oregon's crudeness. Canada and California had painted marvelous scenes with their products. Wonderful figures and pictures were worked out in almonde, raisins, dried fruits—every imaginable product of the country. Canada made a beautiful display of planked trees in it and gave it a rolling hillside effect, and scattered apples under the trees and let in a flood of golden sunlight—it was an October afternoon in the North—and she worked out Neme, aurora borealis and all her mountains and wild game; women in furs, and they all are California made ornaments of her products, and separated them by partitions covered with plaster ornaments. The whole scene, the space is a maze of curious and beautiful turns and twists to things grown in the soil.

Real Product Is Things Wanted.

The visitor wonders at what can be done with simple products, but time has proved that in so doing he gets away from the simple product itself, just as he does in Canada. In Oregon he sees our lumber, our fruits, our vegetables, exactly as they come from the farm, and he has an impression of farm products, not of curious handling of these products. He gets them raw; and this is the way he wants to see them. He is asking for a country: "What has it to offer me?" So, when the Oregon fathers get to work on this thing of a permanent exhibit—and it is bound to come—may they remember that the very thing that was at first criticized in the big building—the rawness and crudity of its presentation of products—has made Oregon's tremendous success. Today at the Exposition Oregon is absolutely first as an advertisement of a state, wholly for this reason.

NEW BOMB PLAN DEvised

Portland Engineer Would String Several on Chain for Airmen.

H. G. Rich, an electrical engineer of this city, has devised a chain bomb that he believes would prove one of the most destructive engines of modern warfare. The bomb is intended for the exclusive use of air craft and consists of a succession of explosive shells attached by a chain to a perpendicular bar at the bipiane's center of gravity. The chain, Mr. Rich says, would be horizontal due to the speed of the aeroplane, giving several chances to hit an adversary.

HUGE TURBINER LAUNCHED

Eurana, 9000-Ton Freighter, Put in Water at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 11.—Mrs. Eurana E. Schwab, wife of Charles M. Schwab, today pressed a button in her home in Berkeley, Pa., that released the new 9000-ton turbine freighter Eurana, from the Union Iron Works ways in this city. As the vessel started on its descent into the water, Mrs. John H. McGreor, wife of the president of the Union Iron Works, broke a bottle of champagne over the bows.
