

KEPLER CASCADES YELLOWSTONE PARK.

NOW that Yellowstone Park has been opened to automobile traffic many beauty spots are made more accessible to the traveler. The automobile has brought thousands of additional tourists into the park this year, and with the extension of the road system through the park, Yellowstone, it is predicted, will be the mecca for constantly increasing numbers every year. One of the picturesque points in the park, one that has charmed the tourist season after season, is the Kepler Cascades. This is one of the places of interest that is most easy of approach. It is only two miles from the Old Faithful Inn and on the main road between the Inn and the Continental Divide. The cascades are plainly visible from the road. Touring parties usually leave their machines there and walk to the brink overlooking the cascades, where they stand in awe and rapture gazing at the natural wonder beneath.
