CLUB LAUNCHED AT DEDICATION OF LARCH TRAIL TO BOOST SCENIC POINTS

Celebration by Business Men of Opening Way to Summit of Mountain Held Despite Stormy Weather--Mr. Lancaster Elected President of New Organization in Recognition of Aid Given Project.

Progressive Business Men At Top of Larch Mountain

American Flag Raised At Larch Mountain Dedication

WITH the formal dedication of the trail up Larch Mountain last Sunday, under the auspices of the Progressive Business Men's Club, another of Oregon's scenic attractions was made available to the public. The world-famous Multnomah Falls, with its heavy timber and many picturesque features, is worth going miles to see. The trail from Multnomah Falls, on the O.-W. R. & N. to the summit of the peak is just 50 feet more than six and one-half miles long. An able-bodied hiker can climb to the summit in three and one-half to four hours with ease. This trail in places follows the upper portion of Multnomah Creek, which forms the world-famous Multnomah Falls where it drops over a cliff 800 feet high at one side of the Columbia River Highway, near the river. It is not generally known that it has other falls only less picturesque far above Multnomah Falls. The trail passes these falls and other places of rare natural beauty.

The building of the trail at a cost of approximately $8000 was made possible by the combined efforts of the Progressive Business Men's Club, the United States Forest Service and S. and Amos Benson. With its dedication and formal opening last Sunday it is now easily possible for sightseeing parties to leave Portland on an O.-W. R. & N. train at 7:50 o'clock A. M., climb to the summit and return to Portland in time to get a Portland-bound train at 4:37 P. M. and be back in Portland at 5:30 o'clock the same evening.

Stormy weather kept back some of the more timid who had intended to be present at the dedication ceremonies on the mountain, but 25 indomitable ones, including one woman, Mrs. George Jackson, braved the weather and climbed the trail. They were well rewarded, too, for though it rained in torrents Saturday and Sunday night when the first two parties went up the trail, drenching them to the skin, it cleared off Sunday for the first day of Indian Summer weather.

Frank E. Hilton in Charge. The first of the three parties into which the 25 were divided started for the summit Saturday morning, arriving there at 2 o'clock that afternoon. Frank E. Hilton, chairman of the general Larch Mountain committee, was in charge and to his remarkable executive ability and energy was due much of the success of the occasion. He got his party into the log shelter on the summit, soon had a roaring log fire burning where they could dry out, and better yet, had a hot dinner ready in a jiffy. He also prepared for the comfort of the next two parties.

The second party, under H. R. Hayek, chairman of the trail committee of the Progressive Business Men's Club, started the climb from Multnomah Falls at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night. Despite the pouring rain, they got to the summit, using flash lights to see the trail, at 1 o'clock that morning. Hot coffee and "regular" dinner, also steaming hot, was ready for them and some of the early party insisted on giving up their blankets in their favor. The third party, led by Jacob Kanzer, didn't leave the trail at Multnomah Falls until 1:30 o'clock in the morning, but by the aid of their flash lights and the moon, the sky having cleared, they reached the summit at 4:30 A. M. and took an hour's rest to eat sandwiches and make hot coffee, after which they resumed the climb, arriving at 6 o'clock. Of course nobody in this party had a wink of sleep that night. Flag Unfurled on Tower. Mr. Kanzer had brought with him an American flag 20 by 30 feet, which, with a tarpaulin cover in which it was wrapped to keep it dry on the climb, weighed a good 10 pounds. He immediately ran to the Forest Service observation tower on the summit and in a couple of minutes the flag was flying from its top, 85 feet above the ground. The formal dedication ceremonies began at 10 o'clock with the reading of a chapter from the Book of Acts by Frank E. Hilton, father of Frank H. Hilton. Samuel C. Lancaster, the engineer who designed and built the Columbia River Highway, led in a brief prayer. Mr. Hayek, as chairman of the trail committee, then reviewed the efforts of the Progressive Business Men's Club in raising money to complete the trail. He gave particular credit to four agencies that he said had made the trail an actuality: The United States Forest Service, Progressive Business Men's Club, S. and Amos Benson and donors of the right of way, who were the Bridal Veil Lumbering Company, Crown-Willamette Paper Company, Charles H. Cooney and John Taucher. The address of the day, which had been prepared by John H. Dundora, president of the Progressive Business Men's Club, who was unable to attend, was then read by J. P. Jaeger, the vice-president.

Few Humans Live as Long as They Might.

The United States public health service and the various health agencies of this country are working to prolong the average duration of life. In this they are obeying the desire for existence which is the strongest instinct of mankind. Only a small portion of the human race rounds out its tour of duty on this earth. Some people are born with good bodies which they live a long time. Some people are born with poor bodies which they treat well. Barring accidents, they can live to a ripe old age. Some people are born with good bodies which they treat badly, and some people are born with poor bodies which they treat badly. They don't last long.

RURAL PRESS RECORDS INCIDENTS THAT AMUSE

Rainier Review Chronicles Treatment Received by Farmers From Motorists and Announces Attitude for Future.

MANY amusing incidents, peculiar to rural life, are recorded in news and editorial by various Oregon writers. Several items gathered from state papers follow: Among the curiosities exhibited as old relics at the county fair this week is an old rocking chair by Postmaster W. C. Wilson, which was made by his great-grandfather in Pennsylvania in 1771; also an old-time powder platter dish and an earthen pitcher, both nearly 150 years old--the platter formerly owned by his grandmother and the pitcher by Mrs. Wilson's grandmother. All three are indeed rare curiosities, says the Joseph Herald.

While in conversation with D. T. Wersckul, of Cloverdale, a few days ago, he informed us that while digging a deep ditch through some of his bottom land this summer he discovered nine feet below the surface of the ground a fireplace, says the Tillamook Herald. The fireplace was composed of three and four layers of stones one in the morning when the train pulled out. Besides the passenger coaches the train carried 25 carloads of cattle and 14 carloads of sheep.

Mrs. Lillian Colter swam across the Sitouaw from Olenada to Florence a few days ago, according to the Florence West. So far as we know she is the first white woman to perform this feat on the lower river.

A party in an auto from Portland stopped at the John Jegeron place near Apriary a few days ago and stayed over night, says the Rainier Review. It is said that they made a regular "bell hop" out of Mr. Jegeron. They ordered this and they ordered that and just must have toast for breakfast, and after receiving all these things they pulled out for Portland without saying as much as thank you for the courtesy. Such treatment as this from Portland autoists to the farmers will soon put them in a sorry plight. The farmers back of this place have always been noted for their kindness and generosity, but they will have to be treated different from this if the travelling public expects to receive favors in time of need from their hands.

While coming down Second street Monday morning to take the local train for Biggs Alfred Vogel's hat blew off just in front of H. L. Kuck's harness shop and rolled down the gutter towards the Golden Rule store, according to The Dallas Chronicle. A man who was a stranger to Mr. Vogel, who proved to be Walter Bain, of Sherman County, gave the hat a kick and sent it across the street in the direction of F. S. Gunning's blacksmith shop. This enraged Mr. Vogel and he slapped Bain in the face with his open hand, knocking him to the sidewalk. Mr. Vogel hurried on to the depot where Mrs. Vogel was waiting. Bain had Vogel arrested and when arraigned before Judge C. W. Moore, he stated the facts just as they occurred and the case was dismissed.

Dr. Hawkins cut his finger the other day, according to the Newberg Enterprise. Was advised to put some carbolic acid on it, did so; pulled a rubber finger stall over finger and thought it was all right. But it wasn't; too much carbolic inside that rubber finger stall and the end of the finger was eaten off.

The Castle Rock Advocate says: We wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. Joe Price, Jr., of Green Mountain, for a ham of a young bear which Mr. P. killed the first of the week. We never imagined that bear meat could be so good. It was simply delicious.
