Officials of Portland Railway, Light & Power Company Present Brief.

VAST TASK TAKES YEARS

Attorneys File Statement in Historic Valuation Case Before Public Service Commission of State. Cost Required $150,000.

Officials of the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company estimate that a fair and just valuation of their prop-erty is approximately $62,000,000. This fact is presented in the brief filed by attorneys for the company yes-terday in the historic valuation case before the Public Service Commission the property as determined by a con-sideration of its original cost and the subsequent increments, and the latter figure represents the value of the prop-erty as determined by the reproduction analysis and with the proper considera-tion of the "going value" of the con-

Valuation Task Is Big One.

The magnitude of the task of arrivat a fair and accurate valuation of from the fact that the work has been going on for more than three years, that at times as many as 40 men were employed continuously for months by the company, and a large number by the Commission itself, in arriving at their respective figures. The total cost to the company, so far, has been in excess of $100.000 and to the Public rvice Commission approximately half that amount.

The contention of the company is that "the determination of the just rate of return is not a question of abstract justice. It is a practical business question which must be decided in view of the demands which the financlal structure of the utility make, and cial structure of the utility make, and with regard to the price which is paid in this investment field for the money subjected to similar risk. What this money is worth depends upon the con-dition of the money market from which money is obtained and the degree of risk of the investment as affecting regularity and reliability of the

Under the first subdivision of risks Under the first subdivision of risks the brief points out that the company is confronted with the hazard of competition in an aggravated form. Farticular mention is made of the advent of the Northwestern Electric Company, which has "accepted only the lightest and most remunerative of the burdens of the public service in the light and power business."

Danger Found in Jitney.

The unregulated jitney competition nmented upon as a source of unusual hazard to utility investment in this territory. A similar source of danger is found in the agitation of municipal ownership.

It is firmly held that the decision of the commission, whether fair or con-fiscatory, is accepted by the financial world as conclusive, that their finding of the "just amount" determines the real "value" of the concern, and that a low finding of value advertises to the investment world that the property is over-capitalized, places a bar in the way of future financing, and makes impossible the future development of the plant to meet the demands of the growth of the community, which in Portland has made and will make great itemands upon the utility. The brief of the "just amount" determines the demands upon the utility. The brief

Credit is the life-blood of the indus-"Credit is the life-blood of the industry, and its impairment is of a more serious consequence to the utility than a temporary reduction of rates. Earnings are variable, but the rate base, as once determined, is likely to be permanent. This consideration of the direct result of the commission's finding upon the credit of the company is one of the most important considerations to be kept in mind in the decision of the case, when considered in conjunction with the fact that we are now passing the fact that we are now passing through a time of depression, perhaps more acute in the Pacific Coast states than that of 1892; a time when almost every industry on the Coast is subject to serious strains and when the earnings of this utility show a distressing decrease. The effect of the European war with the enormous exhaustion of property values is a source of uncertainty sufficient to unsettle the financial world, and the ultimate effect of cial world, and the ultimate effect of which cannot be foreseen. This depression, together with the presence of an unregulated jitney competition—a competition as unfair as could be devised, combined with the competition of a rival electric company—a jitney of its kind, serving only the short haul of the power business—makes imperative a careful consideration by the commission of the fact that in the practical regulation of this investment in such times, a state must exercise a care, because drastic or careless action will result in damage other than confiscation.

sion of the fact that in the practical regulation of this investment in such times, a state must exercise a care, because drastic or careless action will result in damage other than confiscation, and against which the courts provide no protection."

Rate Schedule Retards Earnings.

'In this relation there is a similar consideration, the importance of which is increased by the influence which the ultimate finding of fair value by the commission will have upon the securities and credit of the corporation. The united in the present rate schedules and the present industrial depression a full 8 per cent upon the value of the public service. In this situation the utility will suffer irreparable injury, if the commission in determining value and rates, in a circuitous manner, fixes the value of the property at such a point as will apparently justify the rate schedule determined.

The brief points out another danger if a low rate hase should be decided upon, in the following language:

"With the present acute depression, accentuated by unregulated and unfair competition, no sound policy of state dictates that the credit of this utility shall be impaired by a finding of a Church."

Interest Entirely Passive.

"It cannot be said reasonably that there is a public demand for regulation of the company's rates. None of these appearances were made by persons or municipalities claiming an unreasonableness of rates or service. Their interest was entirely passive.

This is an investigation made by the Their interest was entirely passive. This is an investigation made by the commission upon its own motion, and properly so made, but in fairness to the utility it cannot be said that its rates are such as to demand, in the present economic situation, interference by public authority which in any way possible can invest the credit of the sibly can impair the credit of the enlow rate base. This is particularly a fact, when, in its railway lines, the carnings are such and the lengths of haul such that a reduction of rates is clearly impossible, and when in its electric light and power business the rates are clearly reasonable and kept so by free and active competition. This is particularly true, also, in view of what we regard as the most significant feature of this valuation proceeding; that, although the entire state knew of the investigation and all of the municipalities interested were notified, the rates of the company are such and the treatment of its customers such that a vaccoting in the autumortant and the recent place. $250.
