THE long-awaited state convention of the Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs is over and the various organizations will settle down to work. As a finale to her 10 years of service the office of honorary president for life was offered to Mrs. Sarah Evans. This she declined, saying that she wanted to step down and work in the ranks. The federation then voted to back Mrs. Evans for a place on the National board of the general federation.

Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles, of Los Angeles, is supported by the California federation for the office of president of the general federation. Thus two Western women will seek honors at the biennial in New York City next May.

An artistic and suitable design for a state federation pin was submitted at the recent state gathering in Salem, and Mrs. Evans appointed a committee to take up the matter of adopting the pin. Mrs. A. King Wilson was appointed chairman and her assistants are Mrs. G. A. Hartman, Miss Cosper, Mrs. J. B. Bell, of Prineville; Mrs. E. E. Detou, Eugene; Mrs. Le Roy Wilson, Miss Florence Olson, Oak Grove; Mrs. J. A. Buchanan, Roseburg, and Mrs. Vonnie Owings Webb, Seaside.

Mrs. C. H. Castner, of Hood River, the newly-elected president, in her short address after the installation, paid tribute to the ability of Mrs. Evans.

Mrs. Millie Trumbull reported that the legislative committee recommended that the matter of equal pay for men and women teachers be referred to the educational committee.

The auto ride to the various state institutions provided by the Salem Commercial Club on Thursday was one of the delightful features of the convention.

The women of the Willamette University presided at one of the interesting social functions, a reception at Eaton Hall.

* * *

Mrs. Robert Berger was judge of election. There were 165 accredited delegates who voted.

* * *

Mrs. W. A. Smick, of Roseburg, gave a comprehensive report on motion pictures and urged the clubs to take an interest in encouraging a high standard for picture shows.

* * *

Mrs. A. W. Bartlett, of Grants Pass, was a strong champion of Southern Oregon. She nominated Miss Marion Towne, of Phoenix. Had Southern Oregon put up and supported a candidate at an earlier hour there is no doubt that they could have had one of the important offices, as there are many able women in Medford, Ashland and other cities of that section.

The introduction of a "dark horse" candidate at the last moment is hardly fair to the woman brought into an election so suddenly.

Mrs. Nathan Harris introduced a resolution favoring training for girls as Red Cross nurses. This was laid on the table.

* * *

At the state convention Miss Pauline Kline, Governor Withycombe's appointee on the Child Labor Board, gave a short talk regarding the work of her Board as related to the clubs.

Superintendent Hale, of the Training School for Boys, branded cigarettes as the cause of 75 per cent of the delinquency of the state.

Preparations for making the 47th annual convention the most successful in the history of the National American Woman Suffrage Association are already in full swing at Washington, D. C. The convention will be held from December 14 to December 19, inclusive, with headquarters at the Willard Hotel.

The group of women who have in charge the arrangements for the convention is representative of the type of women who "do things," representatives, the suffragists say, of the women who are working for enfranchisement the country over. Mrs. Winston Churchill is chairman of the committee.

The committee boasts of two successful authors among its members, Mrs. Helen H. Gardener and Mrs. Alice Lee Moque. Mrs. Gardener's name has been known to suffragists throughout the country for 20 years as an active worker and a woman whose literary gifts were used to spread their propaganda. With Elizabeth Cady Stanton, she labored for the adoption of the single standard of morals and the raising of the age of protection for girls.

It may be said, in passing, that, though known to her public and coworkers as Helen Gardener, in private and official life she is Mrs. Selden A. Day, the wife of an Army officer.

Mrs. Alice Lee Moque is a newspaper writer, author, lecturer, student of law and medicine and expert photographer; in fact, almost everything, as she says She can reel off society correspondence with a minimum effort and at the same time has been writing for a photographic magazine for 15 years. For 25 years she has been a member of the American Authors' Guild of New York, an honor that is given only for work performed. She was one of the founders of the Mothers' Congress and an authority on eugenics.

Other members of the committee are Miss Florence F. Stiles, president of the College of Equal Suffrage League, who does editorial work in the division of publications of the Carnegie Institution of Washington; Miss Mary O'Toole, secretary of the College League and president of the State Equal Suffrage Association of the District, who is a graduate of the Washington College of Law and a practicing attorney in the city, and Miss Ethel M. Smith, formerly editor of the Bureau of Fisheries, who left the Government service to go into active suffrage work. Miss Smith has done valuable service for Washington. Three years ago, almost single-handed, she organized the Washington center of the Drama League, and, as secretary, launched it upon a successful career.

The National Federation of College Women, as its name suggests, is an association composed of women who have attended a college, at least one year. Its purposes are social, educational and vocational.

Through college clubs, as they are called locally, women are brought together who have had some training in common and who wish to continue educational work. These clubs are also a means of helping college women into positions for which their training has fitted them.

Vocational bureaus for college women have been established in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Cincinnati and many positions have been filled. The New York bureau reports finding 60 types of nonteaching positions for women, most of which are new "jobs." In Los Angeles a college club reports finding positions for 35 women in three months.

At the recent convention of the association held in California Miss Abbie Wright, of Portland, and many other Oregon women attended. The officers are: Honorary president, Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, San Francisco, Cal.; president, Mrs. William Oxley Thompson (Wells), State University Grounds, Columbus, Ohio; first vice-president and chairman of extension, Miss Anne Mumford (Vassar), 623 Prospect avenue, South Pasadena, Cal.; second vice-president, Mrs. Ida B. Misses Katherine Linton and Georgia Wey delighted the audience, the former with her wonderful contralto voice and the latter by her beautiful, esthetic dancing.

A bright and charming part of the programme was "Three Maids of Lee," sung and acted by Misses Lilah Rogers, Mary Ulen and Edith Olson.

Miss Nina Greathouse's attractive personality lent an added interest to her clever rendition of "Who's Afraid," "Mme. Eef" and Mark Twain's "Gold Arm."

The evening, which ended with a general merrymaking, was a success.

The Alberta Woman's Improvement Club will meet on Tuesday night with the president, Mrs. Josephine R. Sharp, 1023 East Twenty-fourth street North. Reports of the convention will be given.

At the state gathering Mrs. Sharp's vacant lot report was one of the big things that impressed the women. She urged bringing together two great economic wasters—idle men and idle land. This, if carried on consistently, Mrs. Sharp says, will do away with much delinquency and poverty.

Mrs. Sarah A. Evans, in her address Tuesday before the State Federation convention, made many suggestions that will probably be taken up and made a part of the club work of the future. Mrs. Evans spoke from 10 years of experience as president of the organization. She said, in part:

For our future work and guidance, I would recommend:

1. That the Board have prepared a plan for incorporation which shall be submitted for action at the annual convention in 1916.

2. That we enter a strong protest against children with contagious and infectious diseases being taken into public places, public conveyances, and the public health committee be instructed to confer with the State Board of Health with a view to prohibiting this common practices.

3. That, inasmuch as we have been relieved as an organization of the responsibility of raising funds for the anti-tuberculosis work of the state, that the Board be instructed to devise some means for raising a fund for the care and treatment of indigent, crippled children, and that we pledge ourselves to the promotion of this work until such time as the state will assume the responsibility.

4. That we send a strong resolution to the Governor, deploring any attack upon the child labor law, and soliciting his aid in maintaining its integrity.

5. That an investigation be begun, at once, through the proper committee, regarding the feeble-minded who are not properly restrained, with a view to legislation which will reduce the appalling birth rate among this class.

6. That we indorse the movement inaugurated by the Council of Jewish Women to incorporate kindergartens in our public school system.

7. That the plan of the General Federation be adopted in forming our standing committees for the state; namely, that the chairman only be appointed, and that the club chairmen of the several committees shall be individual members be ex-officio members of the committee.

8. That all club elections be held in the Spring, and that the outgoing president be considered the legal representative of the club at the state convention next following.

9. That some definite recommendation be made to the Board from this meeting for a better and more expeditious method of receiving the club reports.

In the report of your president at Eugene, mention was made of the necessity for preserving the integrity of our child labor law. We had no warning at that time of the attack that threatened the administration of the law which came in two different forms in the Legislature. Again, later in the year we heard of foes in the field whose reactionary sentiments as to child labor would spell disaster to our protection for the child worker.

Any lowering of our child labor law must be opposed by our clubwomen. The law as it stands today is the child of our federation and we should protect it most jealously from the interference of specious friends.

As a member of our child labor commission since its inauguration in 1903, I speak with authority on this subject. We know of its workings at first-hand—of necessity for rigid adherence to the terms of the statute—of the extreme danger of discretionary power, which so many who have given the subject but superficial thought urge that we put in the hands of the executive officer.

This intimate association for 12 years with the enforcement of the child labor law fully warrants my insistence that we, as a federation, must oppose any modification of the present statute.

There is no problem before the American people today comparable with that of the unemployed; it is one that makes the heart almost stand still as we approach it, and its utter hopelessness is aggravated by its absolute needlessness.

With our millions of untilled acres; our mineral resources almost untouched; with trees of the forest dying from old age; with waste lands whereon to graze unnumbered sheep and cattle, our banks bursting with money, and our bankers willing and able to finance a foreign war, and with the empty markets of the world staring us in the face, why should the word "unemployment" be ever and anon upon the lips of the American people?

To feed, clothe and shelter the unemployed when they are in our midst is a deed of mercy, but an evil which will grow and multiply by feeding on itself. "Thou shalt eat bread by the sweat of thy brow," was not given as a curse, but as a promise that he who worked could eat bread, and every man born into the world has a right to a job; and the man or interests that can give it to him and yet withholds it is the man upon whom will be visited the wrath to come.

To feed, clothe and shelter the idle is like throwing a bone to a hungry dog, who will snarl and bite because it isn't more.

Closely allied with the problem of the unemployed are two conditions we must face. The immediate one is the closing of the saloons January 1.

It was a glad day when the voters of Oregon declared in unmistakable tones that the children of the state should no more have these breeding places of vice and corruption flaunted in their faces. But how about the homeless man?—the cold, shivering unemployed man who, for the price of a drink, could procure a comfortable chair for the evening in a warm, cozy corner, or participate in the love and laughter and song of debauchery? Something must be provided for what we have taken from him, though it be for his best good—or we will have a carnival of crime and misery beggering description.

There is no shirking our duty in this; our vote was largely responsible for creating the situation, and the women in every community must realize their responsibility in meeting the crisis by providing some social life for the "other-half-to-nite," which is just as necessary as food and raiment.

For several years there has been pending in Congress a bill, which has been held in abeyance by the same interests that prolonged the fight over the pure food bill for ten years. It is known as the pure textiles bill. It would require all manufacturers to brand the goods they sell, so the consumer would know exactly what she is buying. We deluded women demand "all-wool" goods, little dreaming that there is no such thing made. All the wool that is grown would not make one third the material that is sold for "all-wool."

If we did know what we do get ground up in shoddy we would be much more shocked that we ever were at the spectacular display of coal tar coloring in our foods. The passage of this bill would mean thousands upon thousands of sheep upon the waste lands of Oregon, with woolen mills and factories to use the by-products, with a correspondingly increased labor market.

It was the clubwomen who secured the pure food law. Why can they not demand that this be passed? This is but one of the many ways women could assist in taking from the state the reproach of "unemployment."

Let us set it firmly implanted in our understanding that somehow, some way, we must contribute to the labor market rather than to the laborer—that we must strip sentimentality from every angle of the problem of the unemployed; that we must discourage the system of giving, whether legalized under the name of pension or private philanthropy, and reserve our loving ministrations of sweet charity for the sick, the afflicted and the helpless child.

Before bidding you my official farewell, I wish to express my heartfelt thanks to the officers, the committees and to the clubwomen of Oregon, and to express to you all my deep and sincere appreciation for the splendid loyalty, trust and confidence you have shown me—for the many kind and urgent letters I have received from both men and women club members and the labor during the past few weeks—for the help you have given me in building up the largest and strongest woman's organization in Oregon.

I have endeavored to make the work I have put into it the past ten years a consecrated service; I have tried to make the vision of what the clubs of this state could do a reality. But what measure of success I have attained came, not through my efforts, but through the love, zeal and harmony you have put into your work.

And again I must thank you for the opportunity for service you have given me, and for your patience and kindness to me.

NEW HEAD OF PARENT-TEACHERS AND MOTHERS PLANS NO CHANGES

Mrs. George W. McMath Praises Hospitality of Corvallis, but Announces Stand Against Radical Moves in Organization—Efforts to Be Concentrated to Make Parents' Educational Bureau of Greater Value.

MRS. GEORGE W. M'MATH, the newly-elected president of the Oregon Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, will not inaugurate any radical changes in the workings of the organization at the beginning of her term of office.

"I do not believe in whirlwind reforms. They start with a bluster and soon die down. I shall continue the conservative and economical policy already in operation and shall do all in my power to be an efficient president."

While at Corvallis, where she was elected to her high office, Mrs. McMath found that the attitude of the leading educators toward the Congress is most satisfactory. State Superintendent Churchill gave a splendid address and promised co-operation.

Miss Viola Orthchild, president of the Portland Grade Teachers' Association, made one of the best talks at the convention, according to Mrs. McMath. The grade teachers and the congress have gotten on a basis of friendship that promises good work for the best interests of the home, the schools and the pupils.

Mrs. McMath says that efforts will be concentrated to make the Parents' Educational Bureau even more of a worthwhile institution than it has been in the past. Since last May 6500 persons have visited the bureau and many young mothers have received advice and literature regarding the care of babies.

"Our visit to the Oregon Agricultural College was a great treat. Few people in the state realize what a fine institution the college is and the opportunities it offers," said Mrs. McMath. "The social side of the convention was perfect. Corvallis was royally hospitable. One of the prominent women told me that not one person had refused to help in preparing for the state convention. Harmony was the keynote."

So interesting were some of the reports that they will be printed and circulated throughout the state. That given by Miss Orthchild will be one of the most popular.
