STRIKING AGRICULTURAL DISPLAYS PUT UP BY MANY COUNTIES AT MANUFACTURERS' AND LAND PRODUCTS SHOW.

Committee Particularly Pleased With Fact That Distant Counties Send Exhibits and Declare Intention to Return.

Taken on the basis of gate receipts alone, the Manufacturers' and Land Products Show, which closed last night, was successful far beyond all expectations, according to the men from the manufacturers' and industries bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, who have been guiding its destinies for the past three weeks.

The show a year ago was closed with a negligible deficit of $2500, for land shows are not run with the expectation of showing a cash profit, and it is predicted that the show this year will practically "break even"-and this in the face of adverse circumstances which were not encountered in the show a year ago.

The expositions at San Diego and San Francisco have interfered with many of the Oregon manufacturers who planned to enter exhibits, and who have been called upon to concentrate their energies in the two expositions in the South. It was expected that the same cause would work against the entry of county exhibits in the land products

In spite of this the manufacturers'

In spite of this the manufacturers' division was filled completely, and not an inch of exhibit room was left untaken weeks before the show was ready to open. Similarly in the land products pavilion, exhibits have come in from 24 counties, making the largest agricultural display that has ever been held in Portland.

This feature of the show surpassed in magnitude, according to actual figures available, the exhibits at the Lewis and Clarke Exposition and the exhibits at the Alaska Yukon Pacific Exposition.

A. J. Kingsley, chairman of the manufacturers and industries bureau of the Chamber of Commerce and president of the Manufacturers' and Land Products Show, died suddenly from illness aggravated by the strain of managing the show, after the first week had passed. This occurrence was expected to have some demoralizing effect upon the big show, but the vacancy left by his death was filled by the appointment of Frank E. Smith, acting president, who took charge immediately and carried to a successful conclusion the plans on which Mr. Kingsley had been working so long.

Interest Kept at High Pitch.

Interest Kept at High Pitch.

Each day brought increasing attendance to the show, and a judicious interspersing of special features in afternoons and evenings kept interest at high tide every day. One of the special drawing features was the giving of prizes by the exhibitors each evening. This was a great attraction at the box office, and in the last two weeks of the show the prizes given away aggregated several thousands of dellars in value.

The land products division, according to those who were active in it, has done more to bring closer to Portland the various counties of the state than any other thing that has ever been held under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

of Commerce.
Not the counties immediately about Portland alone were represented, but Southern Oregon sent great exhibit from Josephine County, which had a display of grapes that would rival any production of California: Jackson County, with D. M. Lowe's prize win-ning one-farm exhibit and other coun-ties representing the best sections of the Willamette Valley and the Count Sharing.

The enthusiasm and determination with which the Eastern Oregon representatives went into the show is manifested by the fact that four out of the five country prizes awarded were carried away by Eastern Oregon exhibitors.

The second prize went to Polk County, "the blue ribbon county of Oregon." This exhibit was arranged by Mrs. Winnie Braden, who was the only woman exhibitor to arrange a booth and remain in charge of it throughout the show.

One of the most striking features of the show was the enthusiastic interest shown by Southwestern Washington, which while it is in Portland's territory lies in another slate. "Chat" Knight, of Vancouver, had charge of bringing the exhibit and installing it. The Clarke County, Washington booth, was one of the largest in the show and displayed a great diversity of products. The central figure of the booth was a fine display of processed grunes, of which 5,100,000 tons was the output of Clarke County in 1915. Grouped about this feature were great vegetables raised on the fertile river lands and normous pars, apples and other fruits. Grains and grasses were used in the background but the fruits and vegetables were the most striking feature of the display. This booth was highly commended by C. J. Sinsel, of Boise, thief judge, in his report on prize awards.

Display Made Under Different.

The success which Eastern Oregn has met with in the show is expected to have a great influence in bringing more exhibitors to Portland for the show the state of the show this year is evidenced by the fact that has been regarded in his letters that he wishes that Jaske County shipped its exhibit by stage 220 miles to the railroad, and it required is days to get the exhibit for Portland and ready to set up.

"But we wanted people to know what we have out there," said John Hays, "who handled the exhibit, "and we weren't soling to let any illthe difficult of the stand in our way."

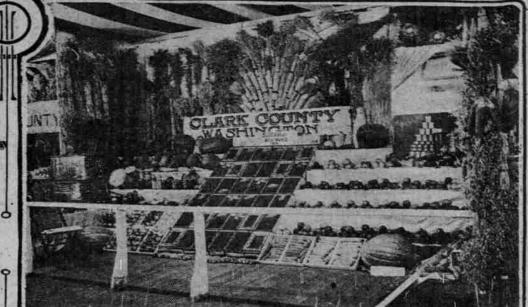

W. W. Smead, of Morrow; W. E. Meachem, of Baker, and F. B. Currey, of Union County, all declare that they will come to Portland with exhibits for the next innd show that will make this show just closed "lok like a county fair."

H. E. Gale, of Josephine County, and D. M. Love, of Jackson County, experses the same sentiments for Southern Cropgon.

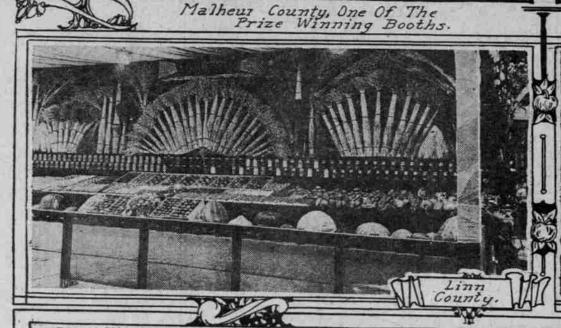

The question that is beginning to the show now is whether the Armory will be big enough to accommodate such a show as the people of Oregon will be prepared to put up in another year.

Mrs. Lucila Williams.

Demonstrators in the various booths of the Manufacturers' and Land Products Show announced yesterday their selection of Mrs. Lucila Williams to be queen of the demonstrators in the closing programme tonight. Mrs. Williams was elected at an entertainment given Thursday night by all the women demonstrators employed in the booths at the show. The Order of Muts will hold the coronation ceremonies at 2:30 tonight for the new queen and Carl Relter, manager of the Orpheum, will place the crown on her head. Mrs. Williams was one of the most popular candidates in the voting contest which was being held for the demonstrators last week, and when the conlest was abandoned the demonstrators themselves decided to go on and select a queen anyhow.
