Precedence Gives Troubles.

Here, again, the President is likely to find himself in difficulties. Which side will be represented at the first dinner? In other words, who will have precedence? Again, who will be asked to meet the allies, and who the Germans and Austro-Hungariana?

The State Department has carefully studied this question. The dean of the diplomatic corps is Mr. Justerand. the French Ambassador, Naturally, he must be invited to the first function This means that invitations must be extended also to the British Ambassaor, the Russian Ambassador, the Japanese Amisssador and the Hallan Ambassador.

The understanding is that the representatives of all the neutral nations will be invited at the same time. Neutrals to Be Present Twice.
