The ballroom of Multnomah Hotel last Wednesday night presented a festive appearance for the Grade Teachers' banquet, with its attractive decorations. The tables were prettily decked with chrysanthemums and other flowers by pupils of Sellwood School in honor of their ninth-grade teacher, Miss Winifred Dennis, who is the chairman of the social committee to whose efforts the success of the banquets is due.

Mrs. Evelyn Denny, accompanied by Mrs. William Marshall, sang several contralto solos which were charmingly given. The selections were: "A Song of Waiting," Ware's "Boat Song," "A Spirit Flower," by Campbell-Tipton, and "Less Than Death."

Miss Viola Ortschild, the president of the association, was a gracious toastmistress in her introduction of the speakers, of whom Dr. Alan Smith, of the School Board, was first. Dr. Smith urged teachers to use every effort for efficient service in their work, and he met with a hearty response, for Portland teachers are most grateful to a School Board so faithful to their schools.

Superintendent Alderman gave a talk on professional ethics and Mr. Grout spoke on the reward of a teacher in the gratitude from men and women she has trained. A frolic, for which Miss Nellie Crout played the piano accompaniment, ended the entertainment.

tempting grand opera when your temperament calls for light opera." Miss Farrar was impressed by this kind advice and changed her vocal studies accordingly. The other day she was in an auto in New York City, when bang! her car bumped into another one occupied by Mr. Dippel. Fortunately Miss Farrar was not hurt. Mr. Dippel remembered her as the American girl whose singing he had praised in Berlin, and her Dippel opera engagement followed as a star for the part of Leonie D'Andorset in "The Lilac Domino."

Before the Russians left Warsaw, says the London Chronicle, they sent away from that city its most precious relic, the heart of Chopin, which had been kept in a casket in the church of the Holy Cross there since 1849. It is now in the place of safety at Moscow. Shelley's heart was also preserved in a casket. When the poet was drowned off Leghorn in 1822, his body was cremated by Byron, Leigh Hunt and Trelawney, and his heart was rescued from the flames by the last named. When King Robert Bruce of Scotland died in 1329 his heart, too, was preserved in a casket. It was given to his friend, Sir James Douglas, to be buried in Jerusalem. On his way out of Palestine Sir James Douglas fell fighting against the Moors in Spain, and as he fell he threw the precious relic before him in the battlefield, crying out, "Now pass onward as thou were wont, and Douglas will follow thee or die." The heart was found next day by Sir Simon Leigh, who brought it back to Scotland, where it was buried in the monastery of Melrose.

In reviewing the concert of Madame Gadski in New York last week the editorial writer of a New York newspaper commenced his article as follows: "Young singers at the beginning of their careers can hardly appreciate the art, study, experience and physical exertion required to interpret such a programme as Johanna Gadski presented to her admiring hearers." The fact is that Madame Gadski is one of the very few operatic artists who are equipped for the concert platform. Long before she developed into the great dramatic singer she now is, she won renown in the more lyric style of works, such as Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and Weber's "Der Freischutz." She knew her Mozart long before she ever attempted the stormy passion and dramatic fervor of "Isolde." Madame Gadski was a singer pure and simple long before she became a dramatic artist; today she is both. It is just this solid foundation on "bel canto" that today makes Gadski the great concert singer she is. Whatever she does is founded on the art of pure singing. She knows just what to do with her voice in every form of the vocal art. The Gadski programme is always worth a dozen lessons to any student, and the announcement that she is to give one concert at the Heilig Theater December 20 will be welcomed by teachers, students and music lovers in this community.

The Monday Musical Club entertained its members with a fine programme last Monday afternoon at the Hotel Multnomah. The day was given to the works by Nevin and Rubinstein. Miss Lucy Case gave the biographical sketches and Mrs. Alice Brown Marshall and Miss Speer the Liszt concerto "Mazeppa" for two pianos. This was the only number not by the composers named. Mrs. P. L. Thompson read the poetical version by Lord Byron. Mrs. Marshall played two numbers from Nevin's beautiful "Night in Venice" and Miss Speer a Rubinstein number. Mrs. Virginia S. Hutchinson's beautiful contralto voice was heard in a group of solo numbers and in duets with Otto Wedemeyer. Mr. Wedemeyer always pleases the club with his sympathetic baritone voice, and was greeted as an old friend when he appeared. He also sang a solo group.

The Tschaikowsky symphony "Pathetique" was the subject considered at the McDowell Club meeting last Tuesday. William R. Boone gave an interesting analysis of this last great work of the composer, illustrating his address by a four-hand piano arrangement of the second movement of the symphony, played by Mrs. Burke and Miss Piper. A surprise and genuine pleasure to the club was the playing of the youngest member, Miss Barbara Lull. This 10-year-old girl handles her violin in a manner that many older students may well envy. She played with decided skill the Wienlawski "Mazurka" and a "Minuet" by Gillet.

REMARKABLE TRACT IN JACKSON HAS EXHIBITS AT MANY FAIRS

D. M. Lowe Produces and Experiments in Fruits, Vegetables and Grasses, Getting Results on Tract That Neighbors Declared Unsuitable—Part of Display Is to Be Sent to Eastern Show.

BY ADDISON BENNETT.

WHEN it was announced at the Manufacturers' and Land Products Show, recently held at the Armory, that Jackson County had taken the grand prize for the best exhibit of agricultural products, but few knew that the exhibit was really the product of one farm and the handiwork of one man. But such was the case. Further, it ought to be said, that the exhibit attracted more than ordinary attention from the fact that of recent years we have read volumes about the fruits—apples, pears, peaches—of Jackson County but mighty little about her general farm products.

In this article I am going to forget, as near as I can, that Jackson County ever produced any fruit of any sort, and turn my attention solely to the matter in hand—the general agricultural products of that famous county. In doing this I am not going to belittle the wonderful fruits.

The exhibit mentioned contained nearly 1000 items. Can you realize that and that every grain and every straw, every vegetable and every blade of grass (now hay) was grown on one farm? It is pretty hard to see how such a collection could be taken from one place.

Other Displays From Same Farm.

But, suppose I tell you that at the time that exhibit was on display here there were two others equally as good gathered from the same farm, under the direction of the same master mind, on display at other shows, one at the Panama Exhibition at San Francisco and the other at the great apple show at Spokane. And, by the way, the exhibit displayed here is now being installed in the land show at St. Paul, sent there by the Great Northern Railway officials.

Now, let me go a step further, and say at the Panama Exhibition the display has won the grand prize over the whole country, but in addition won nine gold, two silver and one bronze medal for some of the individual articles in the display. Also, let it be mentioned that like exhibits from the same farm, put together by the same man, took the sweepstake prizes at the great Chicago land show in 1911, at the St. Louis Exposition, in 1910, at the New Orleans Exposition in 1911—and has taken first at all three of the Portland land shows.

Neighbors Predict Failure.

D. M. Lowe has garnered these prizes for Jackson County. Not only those mentioned, but many, many others. He has a hatful of medals and badges that he has won. And all won so easily that it can almost be said that there was no competition. For instance, in the Portland Land Show the exhibit scored 88¾ points—the nearest to it being 72½ points. The others ranged along in the 60s and 70s.

Five years ago last Spring Mr. Lowe went into Jackson County and made a study of the land and the climate. He did not do this in a hit-and-miss fashion, but leisurely, thoroughly, carefully. He wanted a location to put into operation certain theories of improving certain agricultural and horticultural products. He finally purchased 600 acres of second-bench land about halfway between Ashland and Medford, near Ashland.

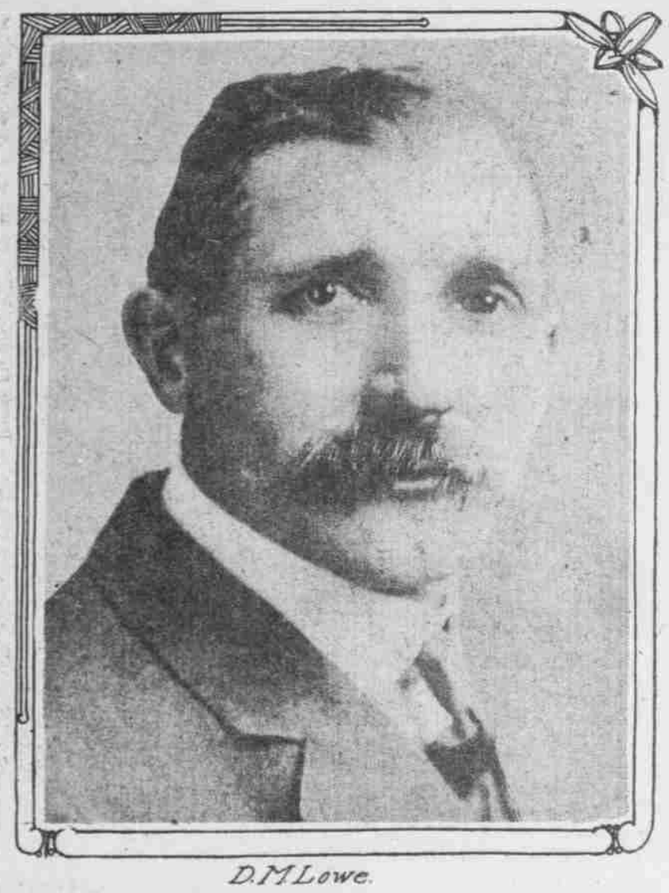
After he had paid his money and got his title to the land, the seller casually warned Mr. Lowe that he could not make a living on it. You see, certain ideas then predominated down there as to which was fruit land and which wasn't—and this wasn't, according to the wiseacres. Just to jump right straight to the outcome, that same 600 acres of "worthless" land produced crops sufficient to pay the purchase price and all farming expenses, interest and taxes and a fair living for the owner on the third crop thereafter.

Experiments Are Practical.

It is a famous farm now, and Mr. Lowe is surely the Burbank of Oregon. He is a breeder of plants and vines, of fruits and vegetables. So is Burbank; but Mr. Lowe is also a student of soils and climatic conditions, and as a teacher, rather as an illustrator, he is of as much practical value to the people of Oregon as Burbank is to the people of his state.

For instance: Mr. Lowe was told that his bench land was unfitted for fruit. Why? The soil was good, the climate was good, and the moisture was sufficient. Why was it not good fruit land? "Too high, too frosty," said his neighbors. But Mr. Lowe knew a whole lot about air currents and he made diagrams of the currents over the lands and on the high spots he planted fruit trees—from apples to figs—and on that very land the first frost this year occurred November 10, which was just sufficient to blacken slightly the tomato vines.

You must not think because I brought the fruit trees in that I am drifting to fruit. Neither must you think that Mr. Lowe does not like the fruit business, nor that he does not intend to raise fruit. In his exhibits are large quantities of fruits of many varieties. But with him fruit is to be an incident and not the head and front of his farming operations.



D.M.Lowe.

Corn Proves Success.

In looking at my notes I find just three of the many things that Mr. Lowe has bred in the way of farm products. First is the Oregon Dent corn. This is now a fixed type and is a wonderful success. It is used largely in Jackson County and much of it is being shipped to other sections of the state.

The next is his Russian bald barley. This is a wonderful grain and the type is fixed from five yearly croppings. Another is Corvallis wheat, a cereal which he thinks is an improvement over all other dry-land wheat. I could go on with beans, peas and other products of garden and field, but will mention only his bush beans—stringless beans. These bear early, and until killed by the frost.

I failed to mention that Mr. Lowe makes all of his entries in the shows under the name of the tract—Valley View Orchards. He is not, I believe, the sole owner, but is the absolute manager.

On this tract are 100 acres of pears, 10 acres of apricots, 10 acres of cherries and six acres of apples. Aside from this he has an experimental tract of 10 acres planted to fruit trees of various varieties which he is experimenting on in conjunction with the Oregon Agricultural College experts for the purpose of studying the diseases of trees and fruits.

Soil Needs Are Pointed Out.

"The day is coming, is near at hand, when all orchardists will utilize the ground between the trees for growing clover and turning it into milk and pork; the day of clean cultivation is past. You cannot take fruit off of your land year after year indefinitely without putting something back in the soil. Such a course spells failure." So said Mr. Lowe.

Which brings us to the dairy business, the best money-making business the landowners of Oregon can engage in. As to Jackson County, there are 60,000 acres of land as good as the Valley View Farm. I wonder what sort of a county Jackson would be if it had an average of one cow to every acre?

What are they coming to in Jackson? Well, let's look at the situation as given by Mr. Lowe:

Dairy Cows Increasing.

"There have been shipped into Jackson County this year more than 1000 dairy cows. I think we now have 10 in the county where we had one five years ago. Five years ago we had in between 300 and 500 acres of corn; this year we had 6000 acres, and the yield will average fully 40 bushels to the acre."

This is a remarkable statement when it is remembered that the average yield of the country runs about 26 bushels. This year for the first time on record it went 28 bushels.

"Five years ago we shipped into Jackson County 10 carloads of hogs; this year we shipped out more than 200 carloads. Within the last five years the acreage of alfalfa and clover have increased more than fourfold. We have sold and shipped this season 3000 head of beef cattle to the San Francisco market."

Thus went on Mr. Lowe. But he went further. Listen: "We have only fairly got started in the right direction, have just fairly got our feet on firm ground. Jackson is one of the best sections in the world. There is room there for 10 times the people we have, not only room but opportunities.

"We ought to have the greatest dairy and meat center in the United States. Climatically and from the soil viewpoint, we have any other section skinned to a finish. I believe it. I know it and I am always proud to walk up to a hotel register and place my name on its page as from Jackson County, Oregon."
