As we have already noticed, one of the most characteristic features of Himself in Background. that "idea" is the intimate relation be-tween the university and the state. But even in Wisconsin, previous to 1964.

In the interim he has been carrying on investigational work for the State of Wisconsin and the United States Government. He is a little demon to work, and one of the best publicity men of the country.

But this article would fall far short of its main purpose if it did not lay the main stress upon the character and work of Charles McCarthy, the Wisconsin reformer.

He is of Irish extraction. His parents, John McCarthy and Katherine O'Shea, came from the bill country bordering between Cork and Kerry Countles, of the Emerald Isle. They actiled, unknown to each other, in the factory districts of New England. It is said that Katherine O'Shea landed in Boston with a single shilling in her pechat, which she gave to a peer woman "who did not seem to be able "who did not seem to be able to get slong without money so well

At length a good position in a theater of Frontidence, R. I. gave him the languaged opportunity of attending lectures in Brown University. He disclinguished himsesif in athletics, economics and pullical science. So well did he stand that, in spite of the fact that he had none of the traditional entrance requirements, he was granted his degree.

the Spanish war broke out, Mr. McCarthy went South to enlist; but much to his disgust, was stricken with faver before being actually enrolled. The war was over before he was well enough to fight; so he took a position as athletic director in the University of Georgia, with the privilege of studying law.

The legislature took the matter in hand and established the Wisconsin Legislative Reference Library, making Dr. McCarthy librarian. The vitality of the idea is shdwn by the fact that half the states of the Union have followed, more or less closely, the example set by Wisconsin.

The legislative reference library with its trained workers, take the raw ideas that come from all sections of the state, subjects them to close scrutiny as to constitutionality, and puts them into simple, straightforward legal terms ready to place upon the in Session.
