Wih nearly 500 voluntary signers to the petitions calling for the formation of a new state-wide Republican club, the success of the organization new is assured and the first preliminary meeting will be held at the Central Library next Thursday evening.

The lists were in circulation only a few days and were filled with a rapidity that lent much encourage-ment to those members of the party who are starting the movement for a new club that will include all former John M. Mann I. J. blassing Republican organizations, such as the Multorpor Club, the Republican Club and the Lincoln Republican Club.

Multorpor Club Recalled.

"Gray-haired veterans among the Republicans well remember that about 25 years ago the old Multorpor Club was a powerful factor in the politics of this state," said Charles A. Johns, one of the petition signers, yesterday.

"For a number of years it has been inactive. Of recent years there has been what is known as the Republican Club, which has rendered some good service to the party, and slso the Lincoin Republican Club, which was somewhat effective in the last campaign.

"But there is a feeling that neither of these clubs now measures up to the standard and that they do not cover the field which should be covered. For such reasons there is an underlying sentiment, not only in Portland, but all over the state, that there should be a strong, efficient representative Republican club for the state which should take an active interest in the success of the Republican party with clean policless meriting the confidence of the people.

Fashion's frills and fancies which were exhibited last Tuesday night at a fashion's show at the Young Men's Christian Association for the benefit of the African Methodist Episcopat Zion Church were of the latest. The affair was given under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Cannaday.

Both adult and juvenile garments of all descriptions, colors and combinations were paraded before the many colored people who had gathered for the occasion and many a time were the costumes exhibited to such advantage that applause greeted the display.

There were riding habits, evening g owns, afternoon suits and dresses and street costumes, with all the feminine accompaniments; sport and skating costumes and many a useless frill that, however, must be worn, for it is fashion's decree.

The gowns and frocks were worn by models, who paraded up and down the aisles, followed by a spotlight that brought out all the beauty of the During the lulis in the display of garments music was furnished by the During the lulis in the display of garments music was furnished by the During the lulis in the display of garments music was furnished by the During the lulis in the display of garments music was furnished by the During the lulis in the display of garments music was furnished by the Oregon and Frieta Shaw.

Giant of Forest Undermined by Creek Causes Accident at Camp of Oregon Fir Lumber Company Not Far From Rockton.

Two children, a boy and girl, son and daughter of J. Smith, logger and sawmill man, were killed instantly at the mill man, were killed instantly at the camp of the Oregon Fir Lumber Company, near Rockton, Or., yesterday morning about 7 o'clock, when a tree five feet in diameter was blown down and fell across the cabin in which they were sleeping, crushing it and them.

The boy, Arald Smith, was 8 years old and the girl "Babe," was 3. Mr. and Mrs. Smith and another daughter, 6 years of age, who were sleeping at the other end of the cabin, were unhurt. Rockton is west of Linnton, near the United Railways tunnel, about 25 miles from Portland. from Portland.

Men at the camp were employed all yesterday morning in clearing away the tree, which was three feet in diameter where it struck the cabin, and the debris so that the bodies of the children could be recovered.

at 301 Lumnermen's sunidang, who came to Portland to purchase coffins for the children and make arrangements for the funeral, reported the accident. He informed Coroner Dammasch, who said there would be no investigation made. Mr. Howe, who passed the night at a cabin not far from that of Mr. Smith, said that he saw the tree fail, but did not at first realize that it had done any damage.

"I was standing looking out the window about three minutes to 7." he said, "when I saw the tree suddenly fall. I was advised that some damage must have been done when I heard one of the men of the camp, who lived nearby, shout. We all then ran out and found that the tree had struck the south end of the Smith cabin and cut down through the roof and walls, leaving the south wall and the north end of the cabin standing.

Cabin Wall Cut Away for Bodies.

"When we had cut the tree in two and cleared away the debris we found that it nad struck the children across their chests and must have killed them instantly. A section of the tree about eight feet long was cut out and removed with horses, and the wall of the cabin had to be cut away to remove the bodies." Cabin Wall Cut Away for Bodles.

the bodies."

Mr. Howe said that the tree, which stood about 100 feet east of the Smith cabin, was on the bank of a small creek and the water evidently had washed the dirt from around the roots to a certain extent, thus weakening its power to withstand the strong wind. It withstood all night a heavy north wind, but about 15 minutes after the wind had changed to the east yesterday morning it went over.
