MEMORIAL TO FAMENDED PIONEER AND SCIENTIST FINISHED BY GOVERNMENT

The Powell Memorial, located on the site of the Grand Canyon in commemoration of John Wesley Powell, the first in exploring wonderful caves.

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The government's long-planned proposal to build a monument to honor the memory of the late John Wesley Powell, the famous explorer and scientist, has been completed on the site of the Grand Canyon in Arizona, a monument to the late John Wesley Powell, the first in exploring wonderful caves.

The monument, which consists of a large granite tablet, stands on a stone pedestal, and bears an inscription reading: "John Wesley Powell, First Explorer of the Grand Canyon, 1867-1911."

It was unveiled yesterday by the government, which has been working on the project for many years.

The ceremony was attended by many prominent figures, including President Roosevelt, who delivered a speech in tribute to Powell.
