LONG MARCH TRIES SOLDIERS SORELY

Officer With Pershing Describes Venture "Through Hell to Mexico."

DAYS HOT, NIGHTS COLD

Men and Horses Fall Out Along Road Like Flies-One in Delirium Shoots Himself-Another Flees Into Desert.

* EL PASO, Tex., March 25,- (Special.) —"It was a march through hell to Mexico." This is the way one of Gen-eral "Jack" Pershing's officers de-scribed the march into the mountains of Mexico behind the assning cavalry general who commanded at the Pre-sidio before coming to the Mexican borster.

Undensored letters were brought bere by one of the American scouts with General Pershing's column, today to the "war brides" of El Paso, telling the first real details of the forced march into Mexico in pursuit of Pan, the Villa.

"This half day of rest has been a God-sent blessing to us," read one let-ter from a staff officer to his wife. "The truth is that neither officers men nor mounts were in physical condition for that long march across the burning sands and the men and horses dropped along the route like flies. A selves to the campaign and will soon be running over the cavalry, we will be so full of life."

"The marches for the next three days are to be 25 miles, 20 miles and 25 miles," wrote a young Lieutenant just out of West Point. "We marched 26 miles yesterday and were so tired we fell in our tracks and slept there. Our men fell out by hundreds. God deliver them from another, march like that one! I felt sa sorry for the poor fellows of my command I carried their riffes and gave them my last drop of lows of my command I carried their rifies and gave them my last drop of water, for I could not stand to see them suffer. One poor devil lost his head commistely and fired a bullet into his foot. He was crazy. Another ran off in the night and we had to chase him miles, and then he was a gibbering idiot. Another man went out of his head shd shot at 'Villa' from behind every bush. Boys were dying along the line of march, and we could do nothing for them. Sherman was right about war."

Men Caught in Train Wreck, Two carloads of injured United States infantrymen were brought into Pearson, Chihoahua, when the train left there for the border, according to Bruce McKeller, who arrived here today from that Mexican town. The men were caught in a train wreck near to per Cumbre tunnel and were though over

"One of the problems that has been brought to my attention lately is the question of whether or not eight-hour working restrictions should apply to governmental office work," said the Governor. "This is a typical instance of the complexity of questions before the state administration. On the whole, Washington has done far more in a legislative way for the aliminum wage, restrictions on the labors of women, and industrial welfare generally than most states in the Union."

burning sands and the men and horses dropped along the route like files. A few practice marches would have saved us many sore feet and weak backs, for we felt the strain of that first 21 miles as if a load of lead had been on our backs."

Another infantry officer wrote: "We are a beautiful looking bunch. Our heads have been shaved to keep out typhus lice. We have not shaved since we left the border and our 175s and tongues are cracked from the beat, we are sore from head to foot and have not slept a single night without being chilled to the bone.

"Our heads get cold and we suffer from heat in daylime and cold at night but we are gradually hardening ourselves to the campaign and will soon be running over the cavalry, we will be so full of life."
