Mr. Roosevelt regarded as the wrong man for one place Mr. Root, who is almost universally regarded as one of the brain-test natriots of America and he is iest patriots of America, and he is lauded by Mr. Tate for wrecking the chance of Republican success, a success by which then, as emphatically as now, "the best interests of our Nation would be subserved," and his doing so is claimed as "purifying and strengthening the Republican party."

If, however, Mr. McLeod regards Mr. Roosevelt as the wrong man for another and more responsible place, this is "prejudice," I fully agree with Mr. Tate that "this is a time for putting aside anything and everything which would in any way prevent the triumphant success of the Republican party, but the same sentiment was as worthy cess by which then, as emphatically as

The find that these immigrants made was little thought about for years, and was never called the "Blue Bucket" mine until a party of miners returned from California stopped for a night at the Oregon home of a member of the Meek party. This family had never seen gold. When the miners had shown, some of it to these immigrants they said "Why that is just what we found when we were lost." After they had told what they had seen, upon being asked how much they had found, the woman of the house said, pointing to a blue water bucket. "We could have filled that blue bucket."

This country has been mined for more than half a century, has yielded tons of gold, and is still producing. I do not think the indications point to the discovery of the "Blue Bucket" mine. The gravestone tablet left over the grave that seems to have been made in 1849 does not correspond with the marks left at the lonely place of sepulture of 1846, over which bends the arch of an iron wagon tire.

lican" who does not wish to engage in any personal controversy, but to treat the question in the abstract, to suggest a few reasons why the nomination of Roosevelt would not be good politics? The most of your correspondents seem to be shooting wide of the mark. It is doing no good to abuse Republicans who say that Roosevelt taught them, how to bolt, and that they will bolt his nomination, or to argue that Roosevelt was all right in 1912 and Taft was all wrong, or vice versa. It will get us nowhere. Taft men are just as sincere, just as honest and just as determined as are the Roosevelt men. They believe that the record will show that Taft was, in spite of all that has been said, one of our greatest and shost really progressive Presidents, and abuse and ridicule and charges of incapacity will not affect their belief. Friends of Roosevelt have constantly declared that they will scratch and fight and bolt if any man prominent as a Taft supporter is nominated; that they will not submit to a slap in the face, or permit anybody to crowd such a candidate down their throats, and then they abuse supporters of Taft who show the same disposition.

They seem to forget that the great army of Taft supporters have just as
