Miss Vera Fullerton, A Beautiful Belle of Seattle, And Frequent Visitor Here, Whose Engagement is Announced

BUSHNELL-APRIST

JUNE, with its attendant carnival and hymeneal festivities, gives promise of an eventful month. It also savors of many other brides-elect being added to the already long list, as several more surprises are in store for Portland society.

Prominent men and women all over the city are taking an active interest in the Rose Festival, particularly the floral parade. The chairman of the event, Mrs. Guy W. Talbot, is working earnestly and ceaselessly for the success of this big pageant. She has gained the assistance of enthusiastic motorists, who are also representative of Portland society, and this year's parade will unquestionably far eclipse all predecessors.

The surface of society was slightly rippled by the announcement of the engagement of Miss Olive Failing and Simon Reed Winch. The week just closed was a direct opposite to the previous one, few visitors entering Portland's hospitable gates, and several well-known and popular folk leaving for trips East. However, preparations for the merry galaxy of youth soon to be in our midst is sufficient cause for heart the festive section of society to rejoice over a week's quietude from social duties.

The dinner and dance at Chanticleer Inn to wind up the season's festivities of the Thursday Evening Club was one of the merriest affairs of the week. It was preceded in the afternoon by the very successful annual tea for the Day Nursery, for which the Fruit and Flower Mission, representing prominent women of Portland, were hostesses at the nursery. The same evening the Multnomah Club entertained its numerous members and friends with a formal ball, which proved to be one of the delightful events in the social calendar of the club.

A glance into the social events of the week shows the celebration of Emancipation day on Wednesday, the wedding of Miss Louise Bradley to MacDonald Mayne on Monday, May 29; the Baby Home tea on Thursday, June 1; Patton Home tea Friday, June 2, and the Artex Fantomine to be given by the Portland Art association on Saturday afternoon and evening at the Museum of Art.

Many folk are already packed and ready for the summer at their beach homes, a number of Portland's representative families whose children are not yet at the school age having already settled themselves by the sea.

Perhaps the merriest party given this season by the Thursday Evening Club was their final one, a dinner and dance Thursday, at Chanticleer Inn. Motor cars conveyed happy groups of young folk out to the attractive inn, where huge crackling fires greeted them, the rooms also being decked snugly with garden flowers.

The personnel of the club includes the younger contingent of Portland society, about 80 of whom joined in the soiree Thursday night. Among those who attended were: Misses: Evelyn Carey, Cornelia Cook, Katherine Hart, Margaret Hewett, Sally Hart, Katherine Holbrook, Genevieve Brooks, Jenn and Barbara Mackenzie, Pauline Parke, Mary Robertson, Catherine Russell, Nancy Stuart Smith, Fatsy Stewart, Mary Zan, Mar-

Misses Katherine and Eleanor Gile were luncheon hostesses of the week, entertaining Wednesday at their home in Kearney street. The table was artistically decked with garden flowers, covers being placed for Mrs. Charles Gaud, Mrs. Margaret Burrell Biddle, Mrs. Wheelwright, Mrs. Clark D. Simonds, Mrs. Everett Ames, Mrs. Gordon Voorhies, Mrs. Joseph N. Teal and the hostesses. Miss Daisy Adams, who has been passing the winter with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Adams, left Tuesday for her home in Baltimore, Md. Miss Adams, who became very popular in Portland society, will be greatly missed from the summer festivities. Previous to her departure a number of friends called at the Adams residence to bid her adieu, the informal reception being closed with a delicious buffet supper. Mrs. Everett Ames and Mrs. Louis H. Tarpley served coffee, and the punchbowl was presided over by Mrs. Henry C. Jewett and Mrs. J. Vanleer Elchbaum. Miss Helen Abrahamson, a charming girl of San Francisco, was the honor guest for the pretty tea for which Mrs. I. N. Fleischner was hostess Friday. Presiding at the prettily appointed table were Mrs. Sanford P. Lowensart, Mrs. Henry W. Metzger, Mrs. Albert Schweitzer and Miss Hilda Jacobs. Assisting about the rooms were Misses Helen Simon, Ruth Rosenfeld, Marlon Citron, Emily Ehrman and Stella Wolfe. Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Hirsch were dinner hosts, complimenting Miss Abrahamson. Miss Ruth Teal and Miss Rhoda Rumpeln will accompany the former's father, Joseph N. Teal, on Saturday.
