Entire Power of Nation Used. "Therefore I decided that I would use the entire power of the Nation to see that there was an arbitration by dispassionate experts and that the conclusions of that arbitration were ac-cepted by both sides and that until their decision was rendered the work of mining should go on in the interests of the people as a whole. When the mine owners, backed by and representing the most powerful financial interests of the country, positively refused to arbitrate, I proceeded to appoint an arbitration committee without regard to the recurring the consent of a poto them, securing the consent of a po-litical opponent, ex-President Grover Cleveland, to serve at the head of that Cleveland, to serve at the head of that commission. I saw the Lieutenant-General of the Army and arranged with him that if necessary I would put the Army in possession of the mines and would treat him as a receiver to run the mines and to see that neither side interfered with the running. When it became evident that I meant what I

"I have always stood for the rights of labor. You miners before me know that. I stood by you and I incurred the hestility of the greatest financial powers of the land by so doing, and I have felt that hestility in public life ever since. But I did not care, because I knew that my course was right. If I had been the type of man who was willing to stand by you when you were wrong, I would never have dared to willing to stand by you when you were wrong, I would never have dared to stand by you when you were right, against such opposition as at that time I encountered. I have stood for shorter hours of labor. I have stood for a better wage for the laborer, for better housing conditions, for giving the laboring wage worker better living conditions and better and safer working conditions. I have stood to give him and his wife and his children the chance to make of themselves all that American citizens should make of themselves. I have stood, and always shall stand, for everything in the interest of justice for the laboring man. But I have always stood and always shall stand against yielding anything through fear or because of threats. I believe in the great principle. shall stand against yielding anything through fear or because of threats. I believe in the great principle of arbitration. I believe in invoking the action of the Government to help labor; but I also believe that to invoke such action will in the end be ruinous to labor, as well as to the country, if it is not exercised with wisdom and fearlessness and in the spirit of exact justice to all the pastics concerned. If these questions are not settled right, then some time they will have to be unsettled, and infinite trouble is thereby laid up for us in the future.

Labor Should Be Farsighted.

Labor Should Be Farsighted. "Labor leaders who are shortsighted may at the moment get from a man in public office who is not actuated by public office who is not actuated by justice, more than from a man who is actuated by justice. But the laboring people as a whole cannot afford to accept such gains. If unjust legislation is given them for improper reasons, then unjust legislation against them may be enacted for improper reasons. More than any other people in the country the wageworkers should insist on just and fair action. There is grave reason to believe that in the course President Wilson has followed he did President Wilson has followed he did violence to his own real convictions. Until he became a candidate for office, he was a bitter, ungenerous and often unjust critic of labor unions. I have before me speeches and letters of his made and written in 1905, 1907 and 1909, in which Mr. Wilson says among other things that 'labor unions drag the highest man down to the lavel of the lowest,' and in speaking of the clerks, where he has full power. Estimating six days to the week, these postal clerks, operating between New York and Pittsburg, are required to run 205 miles per day (for the present Administration has reduced the number of the crews from six to five) whereas the present to five), whereas the trainmen's agreement requires only 155 miles a day, which is to be reduced still further by the Adamson law. The only possible explanation of Mr. Wilson's action in one case and inaction in the other is that only 400 men are affected in that case where the Government has full control of the hours of labor, whereas 400,000 men are supposed to be affected by the Adamson bill."
