OTHER EDUCATORS URGENT

Question Inspires Enthusiasm at State Federation Luncheon-Plea Also Made for Playground in South Portland.

Pendleton's enthusiasm for the establishment of a state normal school in that city was caught yesterday by Governor Withycombe, President Campbell, of the University of Oregon; State Superintendent J. A. Churchill, Superintendent L. R. Alderman and other educators of note, and by all the clubwomen who attended the Oregon State Foderation's luncheon held in the main dinlig-room of the Hotel Port-land.

By resolution at the state convention held in Seaside recently the federation, representing several thousand club-women, indorsed the project to place a normal school at Pendleton. The rousing meeting and ardent addresses of yesterday but served to make known to the community that the clubwomen were in sincere sympathy with the plan which they declared so vitally affects the educational interests of the state in general and of the children and teachers of the rural districts in par-

Governor Favors Pendleton "We do need another normal school, and there is no place more appropriate for its establishment than Pendleton," said Governor Withycombe. He pointed out that the tax for this school would be small and that the ultimate result would be a financial saving to the state through greater efficiency for teachers and better opportunities for teachers and better opportunities for the school children.

President Campbell said that he felt sure, if the people of Oregon were fully informed on the subject, they would vote for the school. He urged an energetic campaign. The fact that a large percentage of the rural teachers have never gone beyond the eighth grade was quoted by President Campbell as a strong argument in favor of better advantages for them and a saving in salaries that are now in many cases waste.

State Superintendent Churchill said that the school should be in Pendleton because the distance to Monmouth keeps Eastern Oregon students away, and that Pendleton offers ideal opportunity for practice teaching, as there are more than 1000 children in the grade schools. Several of the speakers said that ultimately there should be a school in Southern Oregon also, but at present they advised concentrating on Pendleton.

Pendleton Man Cites Figures.

The spirit of Pendleton was exemplified in the person of J. H. Gwinn, secretary of the club of business men who form the Pendleton Normal School committee. He said: "Compare Oregon and her neighbor, Idaho. The former spends but $1 in comparison with the latter's $4 in teaching teachers. It will cost but 4 cents per $1000 for the tax. Can you afford that for Team Captains Selected.

From among this number the following women have volunteered as team captaining to free textbooks was discussed extensively. One member suggested that the clubwomen find out why school books cost so much. Many children like to own their own books, and if the state can furnish them at a lower rate, they asked, why can't the price be reduced for all? It was also suggested that books be chosen without political influence.

The clubwomen volunteered to send books and magazines to women in the isolated districts. This was done at the suggestion of the Forestry Association.

Greater Advantages Urged.

Professor John Staub, of the University of Oregon, and Superintendent Alderman had about two minutes in which to speak, but finde those minutes tell in hearty indorsement of the normal school and greater advantages for the children and teachers.
