TAR STIRS CAMPAIGN

Perry Veteran Writes Song of Hughes' Principles.

VERA CRUZ RESULT SCORED

Captain W. H. Hardy, One of Survivors of Expedition to Japan, Is Actively Working in Behalf of Republican Victory.

One of the most active workers in the Hughes and Fairbanks campaign is Captain W. H. Hardy, veteran of many wars and one of the two survivors of Commodore Perry's original expedition to Japan in 1853.

Mr. Hardy has written a campaign song that has stirred up much enthusiasm among those who have heard it, but he has written convincing letters to his old friends appealing to them to vote for the Republican candidates.

"I don't see how any warm-blooded American can ever vote for another Democratic President after the acts of this Administration," he wrote recently to Anson Greenwood, of Chico, Cal., in a shipment of the early days of the United States Navy.

"They claim that they have kept us out of war, but they cannot make you and me, who sailed on the first steam frigate belonging to the United States to circle the globe—be- lieve that." Reciting the Vera Cruz battle, he said:

"They were sent there to get a salute to our flag. Our men were shot down and Mexican soil was stained with their blood.

"Now, Brother Anson Greenwood, I ask you as an old shipmate if this was not an act of war.

"If you should be inclined to vote for the re-election of Mr. Wilson, I beg of you as an old shipmate to look at the flag and consider whose ships were recalled from there that they did not get what they went there for, and when they sailed from there, there was a stain on Old Glory which will have to be vindicated some time, sooner or later.

"It was the first time in our history that a squadron of the American Navy was sent on any mission that they did not get."

Captain Hardy's original campaign song, which is sung to the tune "Hold the Fort," has won much favor at Republican meetings throughout the state, and has been endorsed by the Hughes campaign managers. It follows:

Everywhere I hear them cheering, Cheers to the boys, the boys, the boys, Shout hurrah for Hughes and Fairbanks; They will win the day.

Forward, onward, comrades, onward, We'll sweep them away, With our leaders, Hughes and Fairbanks, On election day.

See our foes in ranks approaching, Comrades, courage all, We'll meet them before us With our battle call.

Long and fierce the well-fought battle, Victory is high, Courage, we will triumph o'er them; Sound the battle cry.

Lift our floating banners high, Echo loud the campaign cry, We'll trample down opposition's arm, Hughes, Fairbanks and reform.

Honest men shall form our lines With flags and banners freely flying, We'll march in down opposition's arm, And vote for Hughes, Fairbanks and reform.

We'll vote to protect our tariff then; We'll keep cheap labor from our land; We'll sweep them away, With the flag of Hughes, Fairbanks and reform.

And honesty once more shall reign; Our land no more shall droop in shame; Prosperity will be reborn, And be the bright gem of reform.

JITNEY CAUSES DEBATE

STREETCAR OFFICIAL SAYS SERVICE SHOULD BE REQUIRED.

Attorney for Jitneys Asserts Autos Have Reformed Railroad and Improved Conditions.

Jitney competition with the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company and the future of the Jitney in general were discussed before the Civic League yesterday noon at the Multnomah Hotel. F. S. Myers, president, presided.

F. I. Fuller, vice-president of the streetcar company, spoke for that company, saying the present agitation is merely a demand for fair play for the trolley lines. Regulations as to paving streets, giving transfers, running on regular schedules, serving distant portions of the city at the same low fare that is paid to close-in points—these were declared to be essential for the Jitneys if they are to be allowed to compete with the street railway lines.

He pointed out that it is expensive for his company to carry passengers on the longer lines, as, for example, that to St. Johns, where, he said, the revenue for each passenger carried is only 5 cents, whereas the actual cost of hauling each passenger is really 3 cents.

Arthur I. Moulton, attorney for the Jitney interests, held that the Portland Railway, Light & Power Company was, up to two years ago, when Jitneys appeared in Portland, a streetcar company, wholly indifferent to the comfort or welfare of patrons of its city lines. He said cars were jammed beyond the point of comfort and that service was bad.

Commissioners Daly and Dieck were present and answered questions as to developments in the Jitney situation.
