There was a decided swing to Hughes yesterday in the pre-election etting in Portland.

Betting remains at even on the general result, but there was much more

Hughes money in sight, so much more Hughes money in sight, so much, in fact, that the Wilson wagers were swallowed up quickly.

Betting is regarded in political campaigns as rather an accurate barometer of sentiment. It is taken to be the weathercock that shows how the political winds are blowing. The fact

Several big bets on Hughes were reported yesterday. E. C. Shevlin, lumbermen, has run his wagers on Hughes up to a round $15,000. Some time ago he had bet $10,000 to $8000 on Hughes, and this has been increased by even-

C. A. Burckhardt, salmon packer, with interests in Alaska, has made two bets aggregating $1000 on Hughes at even money. He had $500 more up, but the Wilson man who took the bet failed to make good and post his money. Julius Pinens, it is reported, took the Wilson end of one of Mr.

A bet of $1000 even money on Wilson was posted in a local bank Monday, and there it remained uncovered until Friday, when a Hughes man gobbled it up. It is understood this was taken C. Shevlin.

At the Imperial Hotel, where politics is always the chief topic of conversation, differences of opinion on the result of next Tuesday's balloting have been so marked that wagers have re-sulted between many political leaders. The hotel management, however, de-clined to allow bets to be placed there

It is estimated that approximately $20,000 has been posted up to date on the election as the result of arguments at the Imperial. The bets are said not to have been big ones, but to have run up to a large total in the aggregate.

The Oregon Hotel, where much betting talk is heard, reports Hughes money is offering more plentifully at even. There are also bets being made that Oregon will go for Hughes, the odds being placed at 10 to 8.

A cigar store on Broadway reports that Hughes money is in bigger volume than ever now and that the earlier odds of 10 to 8 have setled down to even money. At this store it was estimated that $13,000 had been placed on the result of the election.
