TEAMS BATTLE IN MUD

(Continued From First Page.) it a touchback, giving Washington the ball on the 20-yard line. In retaliation Washington took advaniage of two poor punts against the wind by Beckett in the fourth quarter and worked the ball to within 11 yards of the Oregon goal line.

An onside kick that fizzled started what almost resulted in a cataclysm for the Lemon-Yellow. Parsons laid back and Beckett sent a high punt, the play being for Parsons to sprint abend and being for Parsons to sprint ahead and recover the ball. The two safeties had a bad habit of permitting the punts to roll dead. Somebody dumped Parsons this time and the dinky punt cost Oregon about 25 yards, giving Washington the ball in midfield.

A moment later Morrison dropped back and sent a corking punt to Oregon's one-yard line. Backed up behind his goal line, Captain Beckett made a brave attempt to kick to safety, but the pigskin slipped off his toe and out of bounds on Oregon's 26-yard line.

Hope in the Oregon rooting ranks could have been purchased at a price several points below par.

Noble slammed through the left side for four yards. Hainsworth added two on right. Noble came back with two more off left tackle, with the Oregon linesmen fighting like demons. Murphy called upon Hainsworth for the final two yards, but Oregon's staunch left wing—Mitchell, Beckett and Snyder—threw back the assault and took the ball on downs on Cregon's 11-yard line. in the main: Hughes, 1140; Wilson, 627; Benson, 24; Hanly, 10; Underly called upon Hainsworth for the inal two yards, but Oregon's staunch off wing—Mitchell, Beckett and Snyler—threw back the assault and took he ball on downs on Cregon's 11-yard ine.

ball on Washington's 45-yard line and the game ended with the team mauling each other around in the mud between the two 40-yard marks.

There appeared to be little difference in weight when the rival teams splashed onto the mudiron. One-half block south in the administration building the faculty managers of the two universities were squabbling and d'inputing over new evidence on the Parsons matter. Whatever it was, Parsons played his usual position in the backfield and had the satisfaction of negotiating a few short gains.

Johnny Beckett, the 200-pound tackle, proved the real open field runner of the bunch, for the Oregon captain tore off the only long run of the dismal exhibition—20 yards around right end in the second quarter. This put the ball in Washington's territory and the half ended with the ball in Oregon's possession on the Purple 35-yard mark.
