The functions were each week for the time being. Just as the atmosphere was settling into a peaceful calm, another ripple of excitement was furnished by the announcement of the engagement of another fair belle, Miss Mary Meldrum, who will wed Frederick Shields in January. This interesting bit of news was made known by Miss Genevieve Thompson, a cousin of the bride-to-be, at a pretty luncheon on Friday and it is causing many notes of joyous wishes and flowers to be showered upon the young folk.

dance of the season on Monday, November 27, at Harlow-Grady Hall. Miss Hazel Hall's sale and tea on Saturday is creating a great deal of interest among the prominent women of the city.

Mrs. James D. Hart and daughter, Mrs. Carl L. Wernicke, added to the chain of festivities for Miss Holden on Monday with a charming informal luncheon at the Hart residence in Vista avenue. The table was artistic in floral decoration and appointments and covers were marked for Miss Holden, Mrs. Philip Hart, Mrs. Stanley Jewett, Mrs. Coe A. McKenna, Mrs. Chester G. Murphy, Mrs. Denny Clark, Miss Genevieve Thompson, Miss Stella Frohman, Miss Isabella Gauld, Mrs. Gilbert Durham, Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Wernicke.

When Mrs. Erskine Wood asked a number of young women and men to tea on Sunday afternoon to meet Miss Marion Howe few suspected that an engagement would be announced. Miss Alice Tucker's friends were delightfully surprised when the news was made known of her engagement to Spencer Biddle, as Miss Tucker is one of the youngest of the belles in town. She has never made her formal debut, and only last Spring returned from Simmons College. The previous year she attended Wheaton College, and had planned to return to Simmonds to EXCITEMENT prevailed during the week in society's circles, the first thrill of surprise coming on the first day of the week when Miss Alice Tucker's engagement to Spencer Biddle was announced at the charming tea on Sunday for which Mr. and Mrs. Erskine Wood were hosts. Election returns and numerous attendant nerve-racking features kept society men and women on the qui vive for days and social
