

WELFARE BUREAUS BUSY FOR WELFARE

Work for Relief of Suffering Is Carried On Throughout Whole Year.

BENEFITS REACH OUT FAR

Efforts Made to Conserve Results in Campaign for Funds—Exchange Is Expected to Eliminate Duplication.

The beginning of the Christmas relief campaign by the Public Welfare Bureau marks the fifth of the large campaigns that it has conducted in its effort to provide, as its slogan last year, "Christmas cheer for everyone."

Previous campaigns were under the name of the Associated Charities, the name Public Welfare Bureau having been adopted only within the past month.

While the Christmas relief fund has represented only one of the widely branching activities of the bureau, it has been a feature that has attracted probably more attention than any of the others, before the public of Portland. What the public has not been privileged to see at first hand has been the vast results in relief work that have followed the campaign, for the effectiveness of the relief fund has reached through the months following December, while the donors to the fund have seen mainly on the surface, the rush and enthusiasm of the annual building up of the fund.

Relief is Readily Given.

Holiday season is always an open-handed season for the bureau. People who have helped liberally on funds raised for the relief of sufferers in the various war zones come back more ready than ever during the weeks preceding Christmas to the needs of the poor who are crying out in their home city.

In the relief fund campaign, the effort has been to conserve the results of this liberal spirit so that the gift turned over to charity in the enthusiasm of Christmas may carry its help to some poor family in the dull winter months after the holidays, when need goes on, but the enthusiasm of holiday giving has gone, so to speak, into hibernation.

The recent changes in the organization make a recapitulation of its wider activities interesting at this time as showing how much broader are its functions than those of mere material relief in specific times or more, furnishing a turkey and basket of cakes on Christmas day.

Work Done in All Seasons.

It runs far past the holidays and encompasses a variety of works in all seasons of the year. The following statement of the officers, issued at the time the Public Welfare Bureau took up its quarters in the Courthouse, gives a fairly comprehensive view of its field:

- 1. To undertake the care of all needy persons for whom no other provision has been made.
2. To turn over to other agencies any work that can be better done by them.
3. To avoid duplicating work that is already being done.
4. To keep the bureau entirely free from religious, race and political prejudice.
5. To give prompt and courteous attention to everyone, whether doing us a favor or seeking one from us.

A change which has been made within the past week, and which is expected to do more to systematize the charitable work of the city, is the establishment of a confidential exchange in the Public Welfare Bureau, with which practically every other charity in the city is affiliated.

Duplication to be Eliminated.

Through this exchange all the data bearing on charitable cases in the entire city will be placed available to the various organizations so that with the minimum expense of investigation and examination they may direct their relief work so that duplication may be practically eliminated.

The general committee which will handle this exchange is composed of delegates from about 30 charitable organizations.

Cases innumerable have been observed when lack of a clearing-house for charities has brought about absurd waste and duplication of effort. On one occasion a family was sent so many supplies from various charitable organizations, each working without knowledge of what the others were doing, that much of the supplies was wasted. There is another case of a destitute widow who, in response to an appeal for relief, was sent three stoves by different charitable organizations, but got no wood. Similar cases in the days of duplication could be multiplied indefinitely.

Committeemen are Announced.

The confidential exchange, by placing information on all cases at the disposal of all the charitable bodies, will practically eliminate this waste. The committeemen and the organizations represented in the exchange are as follows:

- Baby Home, Mrs. D. C. Burns; Boys' and Girls' Aid Society, H. E. Arne; Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, Mrs. C. J. Dewar; Catholic Parish, Mrs. E. J. O'Hara; Catholic Women's League, Miss Catherine Gillet; County Board of Health, Mrs. C. Heiman; Episcopal Social Service Bureau, Mrs. G. Howard; Junior League, Mrs. H. B. FIREMEN UNDER FIRE

Portland Business Men Tricked by Land Swindle.

SIX MAY LOSE POSITIONS

Ex-Employees of City Also Figure in Scheme, Which Was Acceptance of Deeds to Enable Sale of "Securities" Based Thereon.

Land fraud charges involving six firemen, five ex-firemen and others, were filed yesterday with Fire Chief Dowell by D. D. Hall, attorney representing several business men who are said to have been defrauded by the land scheme worked by the firemen and accomplices.

The charges involve E. Coffman of Engine Company 15; E. Bradford, of Engine Company 7; Lieutenant W. L. Robertson, of Engine Company 21; J. R. Stark, of Engine Company 3; C. C. Martin, of Engine Company 8, and John A. Anderson, of Truck Company 3, all now in the service, and Patrick Keegan, Frank Medrith, E. E. Dill, Otto Dunne and R. E. Berry, all now out of the service, and George L. Sweeney, of Medford, who is said to have been the ringleader.

Only a partial list of those defrauded has been obtained. They have been stung to the extent of $4000. Mr. Hall says the total amount obtained by the scheme will be no less than $10,000. Those who have been mentioned as having been defrauded are J. P. Jaeger, J. Simon and Bro., S. H. Harris and Frank K. Beach. Mr. Beach was a student of 1909 which he had saved up to finance a college course. He was employed by Bradstreet.

Grand Jury Investigates. The charges against the ring have been investigated by the grand jury and two secret indictments returned. The Board of Fire Chiefs will be called tomorrow by Fire Chief Dowell to investigate the charges against the men now in the service and their dismissal is probable if the charges are proved.

According to the story of the scheme, George Sweeney, who has an alias of two, acquired title to some worthless swamp lands near Medford and proceeded to plat the land and issue deeds. Coming to Portland, it is said he enticed the firemen to aid in marketing it in a fraudulent manner.

Mortgages are Transferred.

The firemen involved were asked to accept deeds to lots and to sign mortgages for amounts ranging with into the hundreds of dollars. The mortgages were made out to Sweeney, and among other things provided for payment of $24 a month. The firemen are said to have been paid liberally for playing their part.

Sweeney took the mortgages to business men and offered to sell them at a discount, on pretense of being in need of funds. The purchaser investigated by getting in touch with firemen owning the lots. The firemen reported that they owned the lots and had given the mortgages and that the transactions were legitimate.

As to the support of the bill that you propose, would not commit myself without seeing the bill in its entirety, and if it is proposed to embody in the bill a search-and-seizure clause, will be opposed to it as from reading the bill just passed I do not believe that was the intention of the voters when they passed it.

Bone-Dry Men to Frame Law, Says Stanfield.

MR. CALLAN ALSO REPLIES

Multnomah Representative, While Favoring Good Law, is Opposed to Search and Seizure Idea and Wants to See Bill.

Replies have been received by J. P. Newall, of the Union Dry Committee, from two more candidates for Speaker of the House of Representatives in the next Legislature, to his inquiry as to their attitude toward prohibition laws and the bone-dry amendment. Representative from Morrow and Umatilla counties, in his reply promises to use his influence to see that the wishes of the voters are carried out. His letter follows:

In answer to your question: "If you are elected Speaker will you appoint a liquor committee, of which the chairman and a majority of the members shall be in favor of a genuinely dry state and who supported the bone-dry amendment?" will answer unqualifiedly: "Yes."

People's Wishes to be Met.

In the event of my election to the speakership, and at this time my sense seems assured, I shall be greatly disappointed if I cannot secure the services of this very important committee of such able men as L. E. Bean, of Lane; J. E. Anderson, of Wasco, and W. P. Eimore, of Linn County.

Answering your second question: "Will you use every effort to secure the passage of a bill which will carry out the wishes of the people as shown in the late election?" will say that if I could not answer in the affirmative I would not answer the question. As a Representative of the people, much less being a candidate for the important office of Speaker.

The only suggestion which I have to make to your committee is that you representatives to Salem during the coming session to assist and advise the committee on alcoholic traffic in drawing an effective law.

FISH ARE STUDIED

Reed College Experiments With Salmon Hatching.

SCIENTIFIC TESTS MADE

Improvement is Effected in Feeding Young Fry, Fish Being Used Instead of Chopped Liver as Formerly.

A special study of the embryological development of the salmon will occupy the attention of experimenters in the Reed College fish hatchery this year. The hatchery, which is situated in a ravine on the north side of the college campus, was founded for the purpose of carrying out under the most favorable conditions continuous scientific investigations with the view of making discoveries that may increase the efficiency and reduce the cost of promoting even more nutritious than the liver and used as a supplemental laboratory in certain of the advanced biology courses.

Various experiments in feeding salmon have been made. One of the most important of these was the substitution of cooked salmon for beef liver. It was found that the salmon proved even more nutritious than the liver and, as it could be supplied from the carcasses of the fish from which the eggs had been stripped, it is much cheaper.

The building was built four years ago by the state of Oregon, but the expense of maintaining the plant and carrying on the experiments has been met by the college. Professor H. B. Torrey, professor of biology at Reed, has charge of the hatchery, and it is used as a supplemental laboratory in certain of the advanced biology courses.

The president and trustees of the college recently submitted a report of the work at the station with recommendations for the future to the Oregon State Fish and Game Commission. The report emphasized the great advantage of having such an experiment station in the center of population of the state and so easily accessible at all times. It has the advantage of having an ample supply of cold, pure water, which is virtually uniform in quality and temperature throughout the year. The topography of the ravine is ideal for the maintenance of a series of concrete fish pools.

If the proper incubating apparatus and out-of-door concrete pools and other equipment can be obtained, the hatchery will make extensive studies of such questions as the causes of migration, diseases of fish, the effect of environment on land-locked fish and many other questions of vital importance to the fisheries industry of Oregon.
