

SUSPECT IN TRUNK MURDER CAPTURED

George Bartholomew Says He Put Lind's Body in Trunk, but Denies Killing.

YEAR'S HUNT REWARDED

Fisherman, Well Acquainted With Suspect, Travels as Hobo Through Underworlds of Coast as Agent of Police in Man Hunt.

(Continued From First Page.) Fisherman was connected with the murder, the police obtained the fisherman's services in tracing the fugitive. The fisherman was well acquainted with Bartholomew's habits, and assured the police that the man was a denizen of the underworld, and a person of degenerate habits.

Chase Followed Along Coast. Henry Whipple, a close friend of Bartholomew's, was visited by the detective at the home of his stepfather, John Salter, who lives near Waterman, Wash. It was through this friend that the police hoped to locate the alleged murderer, for they felt sure that the two would commiserate with each other.

Then the fisherman, lured by the hope of the $500 reward which had been offered for Bartholomew's apprehension, took up the chase by himself. The District Attorney's office paid his expenses, and he traveled up and down the Coast from San Diego to Seattle.

Once the man made a trip to Bartholomew's old home in Minneapolis as a hobo. While the police have received no details as to the arrest by the Seattle detectives, it is believed that the fisherman, who still was on the trail, finally located Bartholomew and pointed him out to Seattle Detectives Hayden and Peterson, who made the arrest. These were the detectives introduced to the fisherman by Detective Snow when the latter visited Seattle in connection with the case.

Detective Goes for Suspect. District Attorney Evans was so sure of the fisherman's connection with the case last night that he predicted that the man would get the reward offered for the suspect's apprehension. Detective Snow left last night to bring Bartholomew back to Portland. The police received information to the effect that the man would not fight extradition.

Threat to whom special credit for the capture is due are Detectives Price and Mallett. The body of John Lind, crushed, mutilated and blood-stained, was found in a trunk, picked up in the Willamette River at the foot of Flanders street, near the plant of the Vulcan Iron Works, late on Friday night, November 19, 1915.

Fred Hansen, 254 1/2 First street, North, found the trunk when he brought to its moorings a rowboat in which he had been riding north of town.

Laundry Marks Identify Body. Laundry marks on some of the dead man's clothing led to the establishment of his identity as John Lind, a man of unimpaired health, several miles from his home, in the place of residence. This name given convinced the police, too, that George Bartholomew was the man responsible for the murder.

One laundry mark was "2021." Another was "T." A handkerchief bore the mark "E. L." A picture, believed to be that of the dead man, was an important discovery among the contents of the trunk.

The trunk also contained a straw hat, a pillow, a sheet, which was partly wrapped around the body, a window curtain, a collar box, several small sponges and other personal effects. The police theorized that the murderer had sought this to dispose of all possible clues that might lead to his discovery. A number of women's effects, such as handkerchiefs, a pair of gloves, a handbag, collar and a few buttons also were found.

Name Found on Ribbon. On a black ribbon, two inches wide, the name "E. Lind" was worked in red thread. In the sweatband of a man's soft black hat, also in the lining, were perforated the initials "G. B." With these meager details the police started out to trace down the murderer.

Detectives Price and Mallett made the rounds of the laundries and soon learned that one of the laundry marks corresponded to that of a stationer who had been living at 407 Stark street.

About the time that the detectives arrived at the place Mrs. DeCorsey, proprietor of the lodging-house, was telephoning to the police that one of her rooms was topsy-turvy and that blood-stains were on the wall. She believed that a murder had been committed.

From then on developments came thick and fast. Rev. John Oval, of 548 Mill street, having seen the picture of the murdered man in The Oregonian,

RUB YOUR BACK! STOPS LUMBAGO

Don't Drug Kidneys! Rub the Pain Right Out With Old "St. Jacobs Oil!"

Back hurts you? Can't straighten up without feeling sudden pains, sharp aches and twinges? Now listen! That's lumbago, sciatica, or maybe from a strain, and you'll get blessed relief the moment you rub your back with soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil." Nothing else takes out soreness, lameness and stiffness so quickly. You simply rub it on and out comes the pain. It is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin. Limber up! Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle from any drug store, and after using it just once, you'll forget that you ever had backache, lumbago or sciatica, because your back will never hurt or cause any more misery. It never disappoints and has been recommended for 40 years. Stop drugging your kidneys! They don't cause backache, because they have no nerves, therefore cannot cause pain.—Adv.

OREGON LEGISLATORS—48-49-50-51-52-53

SALEM, Or., Nov. 25.—(Special.)—Of Marion County's five Representatives in the lower house of the next Legislature two were members of the 1915 Legislature—Sam Brown, of Corvallis, representing Marion County in the House, and W. Al Jones, representing Willowa County. The other three members-elect are Charles F. Elgin, Ivan G. Martin and Seymour Jones, of Salem.

Sam Brown, who led the Marion County legislative ticket at the recent general election, has lived in this section all his life. He is owner of a large farm near Gervais. W. Al Jones, who now lives in Salem, was born and reared in this vicinity and is owner of a large farm near here, as well as another near Enterprise, in Willowa County. Mr. Jones was formerly secretary of the State Fair Board.

Charles F. Elgin was born at Sco, Linn County, Oregon, July 15, 1865. He has resided in Salem at various times since 1870. For the last eight and one-half years he has acted as deputy and City Recorder. He also was a deputy in the Marion County Clerk's office in 1908. For four years he was in the employ of the Corvallis & Eastern Railway and for six years was with the Forestry Service. He has a farm near Salem.

Ivan G. Martin is 35 years old. He was educated in Willamette University and the University of California. He is now practicing law in Salem. He is also active in fraternal circles, and is a member of the Salem Commercial Club.

MARSHFIELD, Or., Nov. 25.—(Special.)—Frank B. Tichenor is the first Democrat elected to the State Legislature from this district since R. E. L. Beddell was sent by Bandon in 1908. Mr. Tichenor resides at Port Orford, the home of the pioneer Tichenor family. He is elected as joint Representative from Curry and Coos counties. Mr. Tichenor was endorsed by the prohibitionists, since he made a declaration for that principle. The election of Mr. Tichenor was due largely to his method of campaign. He made a house-to-house canvass in the cities and visited every section of both counties. His grandfather, Captain William Tichenor, an Indian fighter, represented this section of Oregon in the State Legislature in the early '60s, and with one exception the present incumbent sent to the capital by Port Orford. His family lived in Salem some years, and his father, J. B. Tichenor, died there in 1889. Frank was the first newboy to sell papers in Salem.

Mr. Tichenor is 41 years of age and has always been a consistent booster for Curry County first and Coos second. The newly elected Democrat has a wide acquaintance in Oregon and Washington, since he was engaged in lodge organizing for several years and visited many of the cities in the Northwest.

city of Poughkeepsie, and had herself appointed court probation officer. During her first college vacation she visited London and there joined the Pankhurst suffragettes, making several speeches and being once arrested.

Following her graduation from Vassar College she attempted to enter Harvard Law School, but this permission was denied her on the ground that it was not an educational institution. The incident gave rise to a heated newspaper controversy in which Inez M. Hill and other prominent feminists took part. She also became active about this time in the working girls' cause, taking part in the shirt-waist makers' strike. In the clash of the strikers with the police she was arrested and locked up, but after a controversy of several weeks the charge against her was dropped.

Miss Mitholland finally received her degree in law at the New York University Law School in 1914, and during this time she was active as a suffrage worker and speaker and organizer of women's parades, being featured in them both in New York and Washington, D. C., and elsewhere as "the most beautiful suffragette." At election time she was always a watcher at the polls and was among the women who went to Albany to demand of the Legislature woman's right to vote. She began the practice of law in 1912 as a clerk in the offices of James W. Osborne, her first case being the defense of "Red Phil" Davidson, charged with the murder of "Big Jack" Zelig. Her next case was the defense of Gee Toy Yung, accused of murder in a Chinatown tong war, and she was successful in obtaining his acquittal.

In July, 1912, she married, by a civil ceremony in London, Eugene Boisvain, a wealthy Hollander, to whom she had been introduced by William Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy. She returned to this country and continued her practice of law and suffrage activities. In 1915 she was denied permission to make a suffrage speech at the fiftieth anniversary ceremonies of Vassar College. Later the same year she went to Italy as a war correspondent and was forced to leave that country by the authorities there because of her pacifist writings.
