out of cartons and cans." Some economists and observers have favored a trade commission that would regulate the distribution and sale of foodstuffs. It is suggested that emer-gency methods now in operation among the warring peoples of Europe could be applied to this country, even in times of peace; that maximum prices be established, and that shortages, whether through meager crops, or the manipulations of speculators, be care-fully guarded against. Experts on marketing have advocat-ed a new system of marketing food-stuffs that eliminates needless trans-portation from various depots. A more which prevails. Talk of an embargo is now prevalent, and there is a remote possibility that exports of foodstuffs may be curtailed. Certain it is that such a measure, in operation or in pros-pect, would bring down the prices of certain foodstuffs with a thump. But the difficulties incurred by considera-tions of this issue are numerous and prolific. It is significant to note that, while the American Federation of La-bor, meeting at Baltimore, was declar-ing in favor of an embargo, the Nation-al Grange, representing the farmers of the country, adopted resolutions against an embargo. the country, add against an embargo,

The attitude of the Grange is extheir statement:

Statisticians Study Costs.

The actual increase in living exern to the employes of the bank since he outbreak of the European war, t had been decided by the management of the bank to raise salaries in propor-ion to the increase in living costs. To letermine the exact amount of the inrease, the bank set trained statisti-lans to work on the problem. For several weeks these statisticians were hept busy investigating prices paid for rent, fuel, clothing and food products. The findings of the New York statis-ticians may not be taken as exact for the increase in living costs here, al-though many of the items have kept pace with the New York increases. Rent is one of the items, however, which ave not registered material advances n Western citles; food products, in ome cases, have not gone quite so lgh in New York. But, on the whole, the 31 per cent increase which was dis-tovered in New York might be taken by Westerners as a very definite warn-ing, and a measure by which they should plan their savings and their economies. RIG
