erent sincerity made the service in his church beautiful and helpful.

I was at Weston one Saturday evening, and he was to hold a service there the next morning, and hoped I would "come to the holy communion."

I was embarrassed by the invitation, for there were churches in that day when it was an implety for one of a different faith or name to approach the sacrament. I attempted to excuse myself, but he quoted the words from the ritual of the M. E. Church: "Ye that do truly and earnestly repent"—and made the door abundantly open. His missionary stipend was a meager sum, and, to save costly stage fare, he kept a horse "Old Squire," he called him, and rode between his stations upon his visits with greater freedom. Old Squire took fright peside the Umatilla one the called him and repair aeroplanes. Metal and wood
