MUSIC HIGH CLASS

Portland Symphony Orchestra at Auditorium Today.

PROGRAMME WILL PLEASE

Selection Carefully Made to Interest Not Only Educated Musician. but Those Who Are Lovers of "Popular" Music.

One would have to travel far afield to meet with a more satisfying highclass, symphonic musical programme than that which will be presented by the Fortland Symphony Orchestra, in the public Auditorium, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Portland is the only city within a radius of many miles in which real, bona fide symphony is heard and by competent judges symphony is classed as being necessary to complete the finer parts of one's education. Therefore, a large audience should attend this afternoon's concert and give inspiration to the musicians participat-Programme Alms to Please.

The programme is one well calculated to please not only the educated musician, but the man who likes "popular" music and who will leave the comfort of home to experience the delight of hearing the music he loves by instinct and yet is unable to tell why in learned

The Tschaikowsky No. 5 heads the programms. It is a stately offering and will meet with many admirers. Rossin's overture to his opera "Will-fam Tell" is a favorite in Portland. It has been played often by both or-chestras and military bands and has a stirring, martial atmosphere. Strauss' "Southern Roses" has been widely popularized. As a composition it has been the life of many a ballroom.

Carl Denton is conductor and Henry Bettman concert master.

Enlisted Men Invited.

The symphony orchestra management states that all enlisted men in uniform, whether located in this city or at Vancouver Barracks, are given a cordial invitation to attend this afternoon's con-cert as guests of the orchestra. Desir able seats have been reserved for all who attend and may be had upon application at the box office. The above invitation is a repetition of the invitation given for previous concerts and is in line also with the invitation to be extended for the coming appearance of Theo Karle, tenor, with the Apollo Club, February 5.

At the beginning of the symphony season, the point was discussed: "In war-time, is it wise to have symphony concerts?" The decision was "Yes." The best response to this would be to fill the entire Auditorium this after-noon with people to show that the symphony concerts are necessary as having permanent place in the artistic life of this city, tending toward higher things.

The total aggregate is $304,820.40, and while this amount will soon be reduced to about $200,000, by the payment of outstanding warranta, the balance will still be unusually large.

The amount is distributed for the most part in four funds, general fund $182,810.23, road fund $46,857.70, courthouse fund $72,882.41, and the high school fund $17,982.87.

Frank W. Barton, formerly a reporter on The Oregonian and new a private in Company F, 18th U. S. Engineers, Railway, writes from "somewhere" to A. G. Jackson, of the United States Forest Service, to say that he is feeling fine, weighing 160 pounds and "rarin" to go," Mr. Jackson was formerly a source of information on Frank's "beat."

The letter follows: "Dear Alex: Here's greeting all the way from France, I am gotting some first-hand experiences which make me appreciate more your friend, Kipling. Am feeling fine, weigh 160 pounds and 'rarin' to go," "Am playing in the regimental band in addition to doing a little engineering for my Uncle Sammy.

"P. S.—I am enclosing three photographs showing Frenchmen at work in the forest. You will notice that in this country timber is more valuable than time. Notice how close to the ground they cut the timber and the care they take in felling it and stripping off the bark."

Evidently one of the photographs was picked out by the censor, for only two came through the mail.
