CHURCH UNION UP

Forest Grove Congregations Discussing Merger.

WAR ECONOMY IS MOTIVE

Community Plan Provides for the Individuality of Ceremony Now Prevailing, but Unifies Religious Effort.

Three churches are concerned in the proposed affiliation, the Methodist Episcopal, the Congregational and the Christian. Two are without ministers at present, and election of pastors is being delayed while the plan of union is discussed.

As a measure of war-time economy the triple union was first broached by the Forest Grove Brotherhood, an organization comprised of members of all three congregations, and concerned in the social and civic advancement of the town.

The brotherhood has prepared recommendations for the consideration of the church trustees, providing for the union charge, the Rev. R. N. Avison, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Salem, will also preach a short sermon at the funeral in Portland.

Governor Makes Statement. Governor Henthorn made the following statement today on the death of Judge Moreland:

"I was greatly shocked to learn of the sudden death of my old friend, Judge J. C. Moreland. I had been acquainted with him for about 40 years and I always recognized in him one of the highest types of American citizenship. He was thoroughly dependable and the most devoted of friends.

Within 10 days or two weeks the Army and Navy Club of Portland, designed for the convenience and free accommodation for privates in the military arms of the Nation, will be opened in the Royal building, on Morrison street between Broadway and Park streets.

The club has been provided by the general committee of the War Camp Community Service, of which Emory Olmstead is chairman. The funds are derived from a part of the money raised during the Y. M. C. A. and Foodstuck Commission fund recent drives.

The committee has no intention, however, of spending money for any more than the essentials of the club, and a general appeal is sent out to Portland residents to contribute furniture and other essential articles.

The rooms engaged were formerly used as club and lodge rooms, and include a large assembly room, kitchen, canteen, library and shower bathroom and checkroom. The rooms are served by a front and rear elevator and stairway. The rooms are now being renovated and the formal opening will be held within the next two weeks.

The clubrooms will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. Wells Gilbert is chairman of the house committee and will be in direct charge.

The club is intended to be a gathering place and headquarters for privates in any military organization. The rooms will be entirely free, and the canteen will serve coffee and light lunches at a cost.

MARCH 1918 TO HEAD ARMY STAFF

Major-General Now in France to Return to U. S. and Have Title as Acting Chief.

PERSHING'S WORD AWAITED

Officer at Present in Charge of Artillery of American Expeditionary Forces and Making Excellent Record.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Speeding up of general staff activities is expected to follow the appointment of Major-General Peyton C. March as acting Chief of Staff of the Army, announcement of which depends only on advice from General Pershing that the officer can be spared from his duties as chief of artillery of the expeditionary forces.

Secretary Baker would not discuss his plans today, but it is known that he has determined upon General March as the most suitable officer to take over the work of this important post.

Private messages from France have indicated that the American commander approves the selection and will not block General March's appointment, but so far as is known no official word has come from General Pershing.

Coming from many months of close contact with the fighting fronts in France, General March will be able to put into his task as head of the Army all the knowledge he has acquired. He is reputed by his fellow-officers to be a man of quick decisions, a quality regarded as vital in a successful chief of staff.

Upon him rests the burden of seeing to it that the various bureaus of the department, as well as the line officers of the Army, work out their problems in harmony.

General March is 52 years old, and was born in Pennsylvania, from which state he went to military academy. He was attached to the artillery branch continuously, with the exception of a few months spent as a Lieutenant-Colonel of volunteer infantry in 1899-1901 for Philippine service.

General March commanded the Astor battery in the Spanish-American War. He was graduated from the artillery school with high marks in 1895 and served on the general staff from 1902 to 1904. During the war in Europe he was military observer for the United States Army, with the Japanese troops.

The qualifications of General March for duties have been highly spoken of by officers of General Pershing's staff. Secretary Baker is known to have had under consideration for some time the urgent necessity of putting a young and vigorous man at the head of the War Department, all the military branches of the Army.

Major-General John Biddle, assistant chief of staff, and now acting chief, in the absence of General Bliss, will continue as assistant as far as is known. Army officers see in the appointment of General March promise of a more thorough uniting of all War Department agencies than has been possible heretofore, owing to the peculiar situation in which the general staff has found itself since the war began.

When the war began Major-General Root, chief of staff, was promptly detached to Europe and later, in the War Commission, General Bliss, as his assistant, took over the work, but did not succeed to the title of chief of staff. General Scott, who succeeded almost immediately after his elevation to that post, he was in turn detached to go to Europe and has not since returned to the general staff. It is an open secret at the War Department that there has been a lack of carefully organized staff work due to this situation.

"This makes a most excellent and wholesome bread," said the warden. "We all like it. It is a great increase over the percentage of potatoes generally used in the making of bread with potato flour."

War Bread to Be Demonstrated. She will be assisted by a practical baker and will prepare many different breads in connection with the work which is given in administration, is open to all interested persons and housewives especially are urged to attend.
