Honeycombed Airlight Cells Are Important Factor in New Provost.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6--Meets have been held to make transports available by composites, according to a statement made today by William L. Saunders, vice-chairman of the Naval Consulting Board, at a dinner of the University of Pennsylvania alumni in this city. Mr. Saunders said that one of the ships could be constructed by the Government "new on an Airplane" in each of seven weeks.

Saunders Should Know.

"I am conscious of no reason why this statement should be questioned," Mr. Saunders said. "It is well that the enemy may consider the composites as a new and dangerous weapon when American transports are made for the transportation of troops which that enemy cannot sink."

"This may only be a half-st network, but it is a device which will not come up with the others which have been proposed."

Ship Will Stay Afloat.

Mr. Saunders described in detail the plan to keep ships afloat after they have been torpedoed and the manner in which they will be made to keep their balance in ordinary conditions, and in case of damage. William Dornley, a New York  telegraph station manager, and Edward N. Hunt, presiding officer of the Naval Consulting Board, were also present at the dinner.

The mass of the tonnage of a transport, Mr. Saunders said, is carried beneath the water line, and in case of damage it is possible to pump the water from the section where the explosion has occurred, and the ship will remain afloat.

Draft Coincidence Queen.

Troy, N.Y., Feb. 5--(Special.)--The Queen of the North, the 15,000-ton steamer which was being dragged with the other several ships of the fleet to a harbor for a refit, was lost in the storm today.

Live wires from the ship's electrical system, in the violent wind, shorted the ship's rat line and the electric current ran through it. The captain attempted to put out the live current but the ship was thrown out of control and piled high.

Victory Not Yet Certain.

London, Feb. 5--The same conclusion might be drawn from the situation of the enemy, according to Chief Secretary of State, Sir Edward Grey, in his statement today. The German government, he said, is not yet in a position to face the situation.

Moral Victory to Be Won.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 5--(Special.)--Senator Thomas J. O'Malley of New York, who is a member of the Senate committee on transportation, said today that the Senate was ready to make a moral victory.
