A Message From "Over There" for Patriotic Sunday "Over Here"

From Citizen Soldier No. 258

"They say, who come back from Over There, that at night the troubled earth between the lines is carpeted with pain. They say that Death rides whistling in every wind, and that the very mists are charged with awful torment. They say that of all things spent and squandered, human life is held least dear. It is not the pleasantest prospect for those of us who yet can feel upon our lips the pressure of our mother's good-by kiss * * * * But, please God, our love of life is not so prized as love of right. In this renaissance of our country's valor, we who will edge the wedge of her assault make calm acceptance of its hazards. For us, the steel-swept trench, the stiffening cold — weariness, hardship, worse. For you, for whom we go, you millions safe at home — what for you? * * * * We shall need food. We shall need care. We shall need clothes for our bodies and weapons for our hands. We shall need terribly and without failure supplies and equipment in a stream that is constant and never-ending. From you, who are our resource and reliance, who are the heart and hope of that humanity for which we smite and strive, must come these things."

"He Giveth to Himself Who Lendeth to His Country"

"Are you doing your utmost to support the boys who are now where "Death rides whistling in every wind, and the very mists are charged with awful torment"? You are where the breeze carries the scent of the firs or tang of the sea and where the mists are ever a gentle blessing. Is it much that you are asked to reduce your ordinary wants, to eliminate non-essentials, to save and to lend your savings to our Government that it may provide the munitions and food now urgently needed by those who are fighting for you?

Every American must work, save and lend his savings to the Government. For every sacrifice you make your Government will repay you. Not alone in money, but in security of life, liberty and happiness. Young or old never had such opportunity or such necessity to build for the future. Help your country to Victory. Help yourself to attain personal success. Make certain the prosperity and freedom you now enjoy. "He giveth to himself who lendeth to his country."
