WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY EDITH KNIGHT HOLMES

Mrs Gainel Mountain, Will Assist At Woman's Progressive League Programme Portland Hotel Tuesday

THE little announcement, "Simple costuming is urged," has gone out with all the announcements of the National convention of clubs that is to be the big event of the latter part of the month. Surely this is in keeping with the times and will make it much easier for the clubwomen who will attend the gathering. Patriotism will mark the entire programme. Clubwomen are leaders in patriotic service and are consistent and sincere in their words and deeds.

The 14th biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs will open Tuesday, April 30, in Hot Springs, Ark. The formal opening with welcome voiced by Governor C. H. Brough and followed by the Tri-State reception, given by Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, will be preceded by business meetings of the executive, endowment and finance committees Saturday, April 27; meetings of the executive board, department chairmen, and state presidents on Monday, April 29; executive board and council meetings on Tuesday afternoon.

There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions each day throughout the convention, with three department conferences each afternoon, and midday luncheons and social affairs to relieve any tedium of business and educational meetings.

Visitors' tickets of admission will be given school teachers and clubwomen not delegates, who bring credentials, and to all members of the press bringing letters from their papers or press services.

May 1 is the date of a National child-welfare conference. Julia Lathrop, president.

In connection with her home economics department programme, Mrs. Joseph C. Gawler, of Washington, will hold a home economics conference May 2. She will also be in charge of the greatest home economics exhibit ever gotten together, an exhibit of the Government Canning Club work from each state, a states' product show and a conference on clothing and textiles.

Jane Addams and Mrs. Herbert Hoover will be among speakers on the conservation conference dated for Friday, May 3. Mrs. John D. Sherman, of Chicago Woman's Club, presiding.

Surgeon-General Rupert Blue, United States Department of Public Health, and Julia Lathrop, of the Government Children's Bureau, Washington, will be chief speakers on the public health conference, which also occurs Friday, May 3. General Blue will have on exhibition throughout the convention the United States public health demonstration car, with exhibits free to the public, with constant demonstrations. Mrs. Elmer Blair, of New York, National chairman of health, and Mrs. C. W. Garrison, chairman of health for Arkansas, will preside over the public health programme and a reception in honor of General Blue and Miss Lathrop.

Dr. Jessica Piexotto and Dr. Grace L. Meigs will also speak on the health and child welfare conference.

Among the convention's social features besides the Tri-State reception, will be: Informal reception for civic department, May 1; Pioneer banquet, Saturday evening, May 4; reception tendered by local biennial board, Saturday evening; California reception to Mrs. Cowls; daily "at homes"; Arkansas division Daughters American Revolution and Daughters of 1812; "Little Rock day," and other affairs not yet complete in detail.

The United States Government is co-operating in every way possible and will have speakers not yet announced. War work will receive first consideration and patriotism and service will be keynotes.

Dr. Jessica Peixotto, of Women's Committee, Council of National Defense, Washington.

WHILE Portland is mobilizing her married graduate nurses in the organization known as "The Home Defense Nurses," and young girls are taking the first aid courses in Oregon Agricultural College, in the Young Women's Christian Association, under the auspices of the Red Cross, college women are looking toward Vassar, where a special course in nursing will be given this Summer for college graduates from 21 to 31 years of age.

Miss Harriet Wood, of the Portland Public library, is chairman of the local committee that is taking names for enrollment in the class.

Ever since the United States entered the European War it has been the keen desire of Vassar trustees, faculty, alumnae and undergraduates to have some definite, necessary and helpful part in its prosecution. Last June, in response to an appeal of the Provisional Alumnae Council that, provided the war should continue without prospect of termination, some patriotic use might be made of Vassar's buildings and grounds, the board of trustees appointed a committee of three to devise such a plan. The committee was composed of Frank R. Chambers, Frank L. Babbott and Mrs. John T. Blodgett, '84, chairman.

The Department of Nursing of the American Red Cross, the mobilizing agency for nurses in military service, is in urgent need of recruits. The present average of enrollment is 1000 nurses a month. But this enrollment, heavy as it is, will not be sufficient to keep pace with the military needs of the Government.

It has been estimated by the Surgeon-General's office that if the war continues, within a short time the Red Cross will need between 30,000 and 40,000 nurses for the Army alone. The allies also are depending upon us to supplement their own nursing service.

There are between 80,000 and 90,000 registered nurses in the United States at the present time. Approximately 16,500 of this number are enrolled Red Cross nurses, the majority of whom are in active service, ready for mobilization or prepared for special service. It is the Red Cross enrollment which forms the reserve of the United States Army Nurse Corps and the United States Navy Reserve Corps.

According to Miss Jane Delano, chairman of the National Committee on Red Cross Nursing Service, the fact that the recruiting of nurses is not keeping pace with military needs, does not indicate that the women of this country are "slackers" in the nursing service, but merely shows that the sudden and extraordinary heavy demand for nurses has not been thoroughly realized by the women available for this service.

Already the nursing service of the Red Cross has equipped and sent abroad 1790 nurses for service with the Army and Navy Nurse Corps; has provided about 2500 nurses for home service with the Army and Navy Nurse Corps in camp and cantonment hospitals, and has over 2000 nurses organized into units and practically ready for mobilization.

In addition to the nurses serving with the Army and Navy Nurse Corps, 56 Red Cross public health nurses are on duty in the sanitary zones surrounding the cantonment; 89 are serving directly under the American Red Cross in France, 12 in Roumania, three in Greece and one in Serbia.

By careful adjustment the nursing service so far has met the demands of the Government in furnishing units of nurses for military, naval and public health service, without seriously disorganizing the ranks from which they have been taken. But as these demands grow daily, a serious problem arises in home nursing for civilian needs. It has been estimated by the Army Nurse Corps that over 30,000 nurses will be needed on the basis of present estimates for an army of 1,000,000 men.

This situation is made doubly serious because the conditions of war which take wage-earners from the homes and nurses from the civilian hospitals, produce an increased amount of sickness and distress among the civilian population, with decreased facilities for guarding its health.

Miss Julia Lathrop, head of the children's bureau in Washington, urges as a war conservation measure the immediate extension of trained nursing service to the women and children of the prairie and mountainous districts of the far West to lower the appalling maternal and infant mortality which is draining our National life; and she further says that 20,000 additional public health nurses would reduce infant mortality in the United States to a minimum.

The subjects taught in the three months' course include anatomy, physiology, applied chemistry, bacteriology, pathology, hospital economics, nutrition and dietetics, drugs and solutions and elementary nursing (including bandaging). For observation clinics we have the Hudson River State Hospital for the study of shell shock and other mental troubles, the Vassar Brothers' Hospital for general medical and surgical cases and the recently-established tuberculosis camp near Poughkeepsie. It is also purposed to establish a small observation ward at the college.

This intensive three months' course is open to graduates of standard colleges between the years 1909-1918 inclusive. The school term is from June 24 to September 14.

The student fee for the course will be $95. This will include registration, tuition, board and room and a specified quantity of laundry—so that a vacation spent at Vassar College will be less expensive than in any Summer resort.

Any one wishing to know more details may apply to Miss Wood at the Library or at Wheeldon Annex.

At Corvallis, Dr. Browne, physical director, is giving a large number of girls the first aid instruction, the young women taking the study in the evening from 7 to 9 o'clock.

In Portland, several prominent young women have taken the hospital course at St. Vincent's and some now are in France. Miss Elizabeth Creadick will leave soon. Several Portland nurses are with the base hospital and many in other departments of the service. The Home Defense Nurses are now having a series of lectures on war nursing, soldiers' insurance and many things they are desirous of knowing.

R. A. Booth, Chairman of Lane County Campaign Committee, and Private Michael J. O'Rourke, Canadian Hero, on Speakers' Stand.

EUGENE, Or., April 20.—(Special.)—The committee in charge of raising Lane County's quota of $477,000 for the third liberty loan constructed a large dial to record subscriptions up to $500,000. Pledges which poured in from all cities and counties forced the indicator around for the limit during the first week and the hand is now moving around the circle for a second time, indicating the oversubscription of the minimum amount asked. The total for the county is now approaching $650,000.

Several street meetings proved an effective means of creating enthusiasm for the loan. Private Michael J. O'Rourke, Canadian soldier, who had won the Victoria Cross, distinguished conduct medal and military medal, addressed one of these meetings.
