ROAD WORK IS SAFE

Suspension on Pacific Highway Not Contemplated.

DOUGLAS GRAIN ALL SOWN

Few Farm Teams in Southern County Diverted to Construction Survey Will Show Situation Before Harvest Season.

ROSEBURG, Or., April 20.—(Special.)

Apprehension in a few localities concerning ability of farmers to finish their seeding operations in time this spring led to a proposition being laid before the Governor, wherein it was proposed to have construction work on the Pacific Highway in Douglas County suspended for two or three weeks so as to enable ranchers to avail themselves of teams and men now employed in roadbuilding. The Governor in turn took the matter to the State Highway Commission, and as a result of the conference C. J. McLeod, of Salem, district engineer for the commission, arrived in Roseburg, and, accompanied by Engineer E. N. Drinkwater, who has charge of construction operations in the Dillard-Myrtle Creek section, made an exhaustive survey of the labor situation here.

Facts developed during their probe of the situation show that farmers in Douglas County have practically all of their grain in. It was also developed that, though many young men have left the farms here and gone into the Army, ranchers, short-handed as they were, have a large surplus of grain in the present than probably has ever been seen in this section of the state. A large percentage of this grain is winter sown, and is an unusually fine prospect.

They also discovered that only about four farm teams are engaged on Pacific Highway construction work. The camp at Anlauf, a short distance above Irwin, is working six teams, and only one is a farmer's outfit. The others are either teams that follow contractors or came from the Willamette Valley.

At the three construction camps of the Warren Construction Company—Horse Hill, Beadere and Oakland—the head of work stock are employed. Without exception, it is said, these teams are owned by sub-contractors and in no case contracted with farm enterprises. Even if construction work should be stopped these teams doubtless would not be employed by farmers, however badly they might be needed, because they command a higher scale of pay than the rancher can afford.

In the Dillard-Myrtle Creek section six teams are at work. Two or three of them belong to ranchers, but they were sent to work on the highway only because farm work was all done for the present.

All of the contractors, however, according to Engineer McLeod, are perfectly willing to suspend operations at any time that it appears advisable to do so. In event construction should be temporarily stopped on account of assisting farmers with their work, it is stated that ranchers will be required to guarantee to teamsters the same ### scale of pay received from construction work.

At present, however, according to findings of the engineers, there is apparently no occasion to stop highway work. Later in the season, as harvest comes on, it may be found necessary to ask contractors to lend their men and teams to farmers for a short time.

C. J. Hurd, county agricultural agent, will make a complete survey of the situation between now and harvest, and will be in a position to give such information as will insure the best possible disposition of all working forces when the harvest season rolls around. With the exception of corn plantings, farm crops in this part of the state are pretty much all in and ranchers are optimistic.

Engineer McLeod will file a report with the Highway Commission in accordance with the situation as seen by him, and it is believed no further action will be taken relative to suspending work on the highway at present.

WALTERS GETS WAR DART

Tacoma Man Appointed to Command of Emergency Ship.

TACOMA, April 20.—(Special.)—Making the second Tacoma shipmaster to be given command of one of the emergency ships, Captain John M. Walters was appointed to the ship War Dart today by Captain John F. Blain, representative of the Shipping Board in this district. Captain Ogilvie was the first Tacoma mariner to be placed on one of the vessels, and his ship is now about ready for sea.

Captain Walters arrived here last week on the Garland line steamer Javary from Shanghai. He has been chief officer on the Javary for some time, and prior to this was on vessels of the Pacific Steamship and Alaska Steamship lines and for a time on the Ellihu Thomson.

CRUISER SUES FOR $40,000

George Gothrow Files Action Against Two Timber Corporations.

MARSHFIELD, Or., April 20.—(Special.)—George Gothrow, for years head timber cruiser for the Southern Oregon & Menasha Woodenware Company, in Oregon, is suing the Southern Oregon Company in the Coos County Circuit Court for $40,000. He alleges this money is due him for sales of timber belonging to the company. Mr. Gothrow claims to have had written options on the spruce area recently sold near Tarheel Point and now being logged by the McDonald & Vaughan Company. Jay Bowerman, of Portland, is retained as Mr. Gothrow's attorney and the suit is to be filed for the next term of court.

Besides claiming to have options, Mr. Gothrow says he was instrumental in showing the property and being responsible for the sale.
