

STATE UNIVERSITY WILL GRADUATE 116

Senior Class at Oregon Has 13 Married Persons, With Five War Brides.

18 ALREADY IN SERVICE

More Women to Get Diplomas for First Time at Annual Commencement at Eugene Tomorrow.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, June 15.—(Special.)—Eighty-three women and 33 men, 116 in all, will receive their diplomas from President P. L. Campbell at the final exercises of the 42d annual commencement of the university Monday morning, and pass into the ranks of the Oregon Alumni.

From two points of view this year's graduating class is unusual in the history of classes to leave the university—it includes a smaller percentage of men and a larger number of married members than any of the 41 previous classes.

Since the opening of the 1917-18 college year 26 men enrolled in the classes of 1918 have left their studies to enter some branch of the service. Eighteen of these completed enough of their university work before leaving the campus to be included among those to whom are to be awarded diplomas. They are Raymond N. Allen, Eugene; Charles Tisdale, Sutherlin; Ray Couch, Island City, Or.; Satoll Hanna, Coberg, Or.; Donald C. Roberts, Astoria; Elmer Howard, Grants Pass; Perry E. Aram, Mouth; Charles H. Dundore, Portland; Irwin Hartley, Eugene; Giles M. Hunter, Roseburg; James C. McCallum, Eugene; Walter J. Matson, Astoria; Russel A. Quisenberry, Eugene; William Ralph Service, Silverton; Melvin T. Solve, Bandon; A. Glenn Stanton, Humboldt, Ia.; Frank H. Willson, Dallas; Jesse B. Witty, Elgin.

Five Seniors War Brides.

To the war can also be attributed the cause for the large number of married people in the class, at least five of the matrons being recent war brides. Of the 13 who have put the wedding ceremony behind them only three are men. The list includes Mary Withycombe Baney, Anna Lansbury Beck, Lillian Mae Bancroft Carpenter, Louise Kellens, Albert C. Hartley, Charles Tisdale, Walter Lee Myers, Mrs. A. E. Watson, Mabel Van Zante Gorescky, Helen Bracht Maurice, Emma Wootton Hall and Louise Clamby Jones.

As in former years, English literature degrees will be more numerous than those of any other department. 17 of the graduates claiming that as their major subject. The mathematics department is second with 14, and German, despite the boycott placed upon that language since the entry of the United States into the war, is third, with 13 graduates.

BRITISH FOOD AMPLE

All Have Enough, but Banquets Are Out of Style.

ENGLISH DRINK MUCH LESS

Manufacture of Spirits for Beverage Purposes Abolished and Alcoholic Liquors Now Consumed Are Old Stock.

HOOD RIVER, Or., June 15.—(Special.)—With the exception of fruits, which are scarce and high priced, the food situation in England, according to a copy of the London Daily Mail, just received here by C. G. Roberts, a Des orchardist, is very satisfactory.

Excerpts from an article in the London newspaper follow:

"There is plenty of food for everybody. I do not mean that you can indulge in the old extravagant orgies of innumerable courses at meals, because you cannot. The restaurants suffer most of all, and the old English habit of banqueting has had a severe blow. The banquet has been shorn of its glories.

"Certain special articles of food have become very dear. Apples, for instance, have risen out of all reason. In one West End shop a few days ago I saw moderate-sized eating apples priced at 1s 6d (38 cents) each. Fifteen and 18 pence (39 and 46 cents) for eating apples is common.

Vegetable Supply Ample.

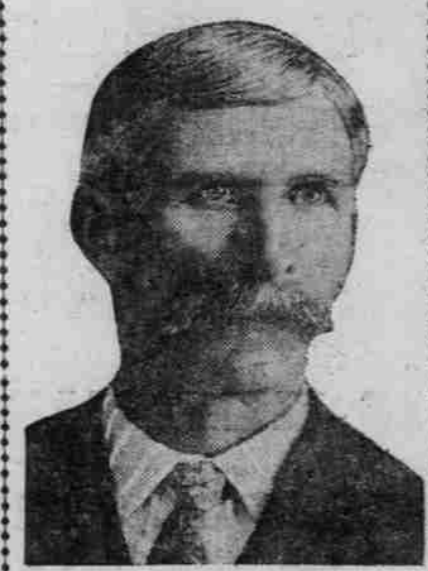

"Oranges are almost as scarce, but there are plenty of vegetables, plenty of milk, ample supplies of eggs and sufficient meat. When we read of conditions prevailing in many other countries we congratulate ourselves and take courage."

Commenting on the drink question, the article continues:

"I continue to receive, particularly from the United States and Canada, letters denouncing England for allowing Canadian and American grain to be used for the manufacture of intoxicating liquor.

"I have every sympathy with the feelings of some of these writers. If John Bull was urging the West to speed up its grain production in order that we might have more intoxicants that we might have more intoxicants."

EX-MAILCARRIER IN ALASKA WHO IS DEAD.

Frank W. Reed.

Frank W. Reed, 60 years old, formerly a mailcarrier in Alaska, and a well-known ex-resident of Douglas County, died June 2 at his farm home near Lebanon. Mr. Reed was born May 3, 1858, in Douglas County and lived in Willabur, Or., until about 16 years of age, when he went to Eastern Oregon. He led the life of cowboy until 1889.

In 1888 he married Miss Anjell Archambeau and went back to Douglas County, living in Roseburg until 1906, when he went to Alaska to carry Government mail into the interior and to engage in gold mining. He returned to Oregon in 1916.

here it would be a disgraceful state of affairs. But what are the facts in the case?

"No wheat nor grain of any kind has been used for distilling liquor of any kind for over a year past. No manufacture of spirits for human consumption has been permitted for some time in the United Kingdom, and no further manufacture is at present contemplated.

"The whisky and other spirits now being consumed, a mere fraction of what was being consumed before the war, are old stock.

"In the case of beer the production has been decreased to one-third of what it was before the war, and the strength of the beer has been reduced to approximately 2 per cent alcohol.

"England has reduced her consumption of intoxicating liquors during the war far more than the United States has done. The present rate of consumption of alcoholic beverages, as compared with the rate before the war, shows a reduction of 72 per cent. The total amount of materials used in brewing does not amount to 2 per cent of the total food supply of the United Kingdom and one-third of this is recovered for animal food. What the drink provided by the other two-thirds is a form of food or not is a matter on which there are differences of opinion."

OLD TREATY UNEARTHED

INDIANS TO PRESS VAST CLAIMS AGAINST GOVERNMENT.

Original Empire Draft, Signed During Summer of 1855, Establishes Right of Early Oregon Tribes.

MARSHFIELD, Or., June 15.—(Special.)—After a lapse of 63 years the original inhabitants of Southwestern Oregon—the Coos, Umpqua and Siuslaw Indians—have succeeded in having their rights advanced to a position where they can go into the United States Courts and present their vast claims against the Government.

Senator Charles McNary, who introduced the bill which recently passed the Senate, gave the representatives of the Indians valuable aid in Washington. This assistance followed more than three years constant work on the part of George Wasson, of Coos Bay, and of a former Indian agent who resigned from the Government employ to help what he said was a proper adjudication of the Indians' rights.

Mr. Wasson and his assistants spent more than a year in searching for the original copy of the Treaty of Empire, in which the Government and Coast Indians reached an agreement. The draft was discovered in the archives in the National capital. The provisions of the treaty included a covenant on the part of the Government to supply the Indians with schools, farming implements, homes, flour mills, medical attention, annuities and cash payments.

The treaty was signed by the Indian chiefs and Indian Agent Joel Palmer, at Empire, in Coos County, August 17, 1855. The Government received in consideration a release of all the Coast country from the vicinity of Heceta Head to the Columbia River, and the Indians were to have a reservation between the Coquille River and Heceta as their reservation and own it. The treaty did not receive sanction by the Senate and House of Representatives, but the Government required of the Indians all the items in the agreement and all that the Indians had agreed to was enforced by the Government, while the Government failed to perform any part of its obligations. Teachers and other instructors were to have been a part of the help furnished by the Government, such as blacksmiths, farmers, mill sawyers and millers.

It is not expected there will be any disturbance of titles within the vast area set off to the Indians when the treaty was signed and which is now dotted with populous cities, farms, fishing grounds, forests. The plan, according to the procedure followed, is to reimburse the tribes for their lands and for the indignities suffered by them while being moved about from pillar to post during the time Congress was considering approval of the treaty.
