AGED MAN IS LOST IN CASCADE WILDS

Henry A. French, 70, Believed to Have Perished Near Monte Cristo, Wash.

LONG SEARCH FRUITLESS

Former Resident of Portland Goes Into Woods With Camera, but Fails to Return to Inn-Son Will Continue Hunt.

Henry A French, 70 years old, a restdent of Portland for 25 years, is lost and probably dead in the Cascade Mountains near Monte Cristo, Wash.

Mr. French, who was staying at Cass-erest Inn at Monte Cristo, went out for s trip through the woods with his camers on the morning of July 16 and has not been seen since. Searching parties we're organized late in the same after-we're organized late in the same afterno'n and the woods were scoured until late at night, but no traces were found.

The next day, with the assistance of forest rangers, the Sheriff of Snohomish County and his deputies and numerous townspeople, the search was continued, but without success.

L. H. French, the lost man's son, was sent for, and he took up the hunt on Thursday. Bloodhounds were brought from the State Reform School at Monroe, Wash, and the whole country was thoroughly scoured. Fearing that Mr.
French had fallen into some falls near the inn, the searching party let down men from above a distance of 60 feet.
By this means the pools at the foot of the falls were examined, but no trace of clothing was found.

The country around Monte Cristo is very rough and rocky. Twenty years ago there were large mining operations going on around the town. Rockefeller is said to have taken over two million dollars out of his mining properties there. The whole district is honeycombed with old prospect holes from 50 to 200 feet deep, many of which are full of water. It is quite possible that Mr. French fell into one of these holes, though there were none on the trail though there were none on the on which he was walking at the time

Public Library Notes.

THERE is much exercise of individuality in choosing a book-platejust as in choosing books themselvesor cravats-it is such an intimate personal expression of taste. One chooses an artistic design with the French phrase, "Lesbons livres and deabonsamis," another chooses the symmetrical outline of a fountain with birds playing about it; a third, a landscape effect of sharply pointed firstrees against a background of low-baseing clouds; another a curtained hanging clouds: another, a curtained window, with books beneath—through the parted curtains of which may be seen the vista of a winding road.

"Companions who neither vary nor ' is the tribute to books on one book-plate. On another-above an open book-is the inscription-"Old books to read, old prints to scan, old word to carve, old friends to greet." A pile of books, a Roman lamp intestwined with laurel, is the symbol-ism of the Vassar Alumnae Historical Association on its book-plate. "And all ask is a tall ship and a star to steer er by," is the legend on another. A jester leaning saucily on a table before which a monk is seated is the appropriate design of a book-plate for a collection of humorous books. Another shows crossed quills above an open page—candles burning at either end, suggesting that the owner

Reed College has an interesting shield design bearing a Latin motto, the spirit of which is: "You will presente liberty, friendship and loyalty."

The art room at the Library is forming a collection of interesting bookplates which contain the ones described, and many others, which are being exhibited in the second floor rounds at the Library, and Miss Isom rotunds at the Library, and Miss Isom will be glad to receive duplicates of others not in the collection. There must be many desirable book-plates belonging to Portland people that have not found their way into the Library collection. May we beg two copies of your book-plate to add to the art room collection?

COURAGE

Two Comrades Are Saved in Face of Violent Enemy Bombardment. French and American Officers Give Praise.

Ernest G. Gray, formerly of Portland, son of Mrs. Annie Gray, 1550 Vincent avenue, and a brother of William G. Gray, 1548 Vincent avenue, now a member of the 101st Field Battalion, Signal Corps, has been cited in the French and the American Army orders for bravery in action.

The French citation reads as follows "The commanding General of the 32d Army Corps cites on the roll of honor Ernest G. Gray, 101st Field Battalion, Signal Corps, He has shown great cool-ness and courage during violent enemy bombardment. The explosion of a shell threw him out of his dugout, in which he was operating a telephone station Notwithstanding the concussion caused by the shell explosions and under the most violent bombardment, he saved two comrades who were buried under earth and debris." This order was signed by General Passaga, commanding the 32d Army Corps.

The American citation signed by Duncan K. Major, Jr., Lieutenant-Col-onel, Infantry, Chief of Staff, in nam-ling the men for gallantry, said: "At 2:30 o'clock on the morning of April 20, 1818, the enemy opened fire on our sector in the neighborhood of Seicheprey, a violent artillery bombardment from concentrated artillery, which involved all the rear area, as well as the trenches and dugouts. Shortly thereafter, under protection of Shortly thereafter, under protection of a heavy barrage and dense fog, he launched a determined and vigorous attack, preceded by a force of storm troops, estimated at least at 1200, and two infantry battalions with maching guns, sappers and pioneer troops, accompanied by much material. The enemy made a bold and determined attempt to gain permanent foothold in that part of our sector. The engagement lasted well on into the 21st, when the enemy, after a particularly desperate struggle at close quarters, was forced to retire without having attained his objective and after being severely punished. The fight, by the very necessity of the case, under the smothering artillery bombardment of shrapnel and high explosives and a
