Can Senator Be Re-Elected? Is Puzzle to Many.

Real Displeasure of President's Backers Comes When Oregon Man Criticises War Office.

Can George Chamberlain be reelected to the United States Senate two hears hence?

This question has been going the rounds of late, and wherever propounded it precipitates, instantly, a dissertation in which Oregon politics and the Wilson Administration are mingled. One thing is certain, there mingled. One thing is certain, there are a great many Democrats and a large number of Republicans who enteriain strong views on the subject. On one point there is a convergence of opinion. It is pretty generally admitted that Senator Chamberlain is not in the good graces of the Administration at Washington. This point being admitted, the next to consider is what hearing this situation will have on the Senator's political prospects—conceding, of course, that the Senator desires to continue as Oregon's senior Senator. And it is the attitude of the Administration which is of importance now, although two years hence it may now, although two years bence it may not have the same degree of influence.

Wison Defended Baker.

Wison Defended Baker.

How Senator Chamberlain incurred the displeasure of the Administration is a long story. In fact, Mr. Wijson and Senator Chamberlain did not hitch when Mr. Wilson took office, for the President did not recognize the patronage which the Senator, by the rules of the game, should have had. But the real displeasure of the Administration was shown when Chamberlain criticised the West Department and Mr. Wilson the West Department and Mr. Wilson abown, when Chamberlain criticises the War Department, and Mr. Wilson flow to the defense of Secretary of War Baker. That criticism of the War Department off set any gratitude the Ad ministration may have had for Senator Chamberlain's pulling through the se-lective draft bill, or the Oregon Sena-tor's work for the food conservation programme, when Democratic Senators programme, when Democratic Senators who ranked him on the committee were lukewarm in supporting the Administration's programme.

So one concrete fact looms like Mount Hood: Senator Chamberlain has supported the Administration, but the Administration is not supporting Senator Chamberlain. Of course, the next two years may iron out this difference, and then again they may not. Elections to be held next month throughout the Nation have disclosed that Mr. Wilson does not hesitate to make recommendations of certain ennidiates, nor 10 ask for the defeat of others. the defeat of others.

Party Duty Urges.

Taking their eve from Washington, many of the Democrats in Oregon are not shouting enthusiastically about "our George" these days, as was formerly their wont. The Democrats, particularly those who "have hopes" or are now "in," think that Senator Chamberiain has been very inconsiderate. The Democrats like George, but—well—you know—a Democrat must stick by Mr. Wilson as between the two, you understand.

To be brutally frank, some of the Party Duty Urges.

To be brutally frank, some of the Democratic warhorses are already speaking as though Senator Chamber-lain is in the discard, and they are scanning the horizon for a Democrat with Senatorial aspirations. Of the latter sort there are a few secretly nursing ambitions. However, Senator Chamberlain has always had his most bitter enemies within the ranks of his own party, and these enemies are represented among the Democrats who are edicting doleful things two years

Here is another place where Democrats and Republicans agree: If the Administration comes out openly and auggests that he be not elected. Sen ator Chamberlain will have need of hi rabbit's foot, horseshoe and four-lead But, in that same election the Administration will be striving to per-petuate itself.

West Issues Ultimatum

In this connection an interesting story comes from Washington concerning the efforts of ex-Governor West to restore a feeling of amity toward Chamberlain among Senators who have the Administration

West, it is related, called a meeting of several of these Senators and an-nounced flatly that the strength he nounced flatly that the strength he had in Oregon was Oswald West's strength and that he did not care a continental for Administration indorsement. It is said that he further amounced that he was likely to be elected, and that if he was he would be Chamberlain's "me, too." In short, West delivered the ultimatum that if Chamberlain were not restored to the Administration's good graces the Administration would have two Democratic Senators to reckon with instead
