HOMER MORGAN ACCOUNTS FOR 16 BOCHES IN RECENT TERRIFIC FIGHTING IN FRANCE

Boys From Almost Every Section of Northwest Participate in Great Battle to Free World From Menace of Kaiserism and Autocracy Terror.

PRIVATE CHARLES J. PORTER, son of Mrs. Elsie O. Porter, 494 East Ankeny street, refused an appointment to an officers' training school because it would of necessity break up a company quartet of which he was a member. The story was published in a recent issue of "Trench and Camp," the Y. M. C. A. paper, where Private Porter is mentioned. He was inducted into the army last June. Members of the quartet were chosen from 3700 contestants in the Presidio. He took part in many amateur entertainments in Portland. His voice has made him especially popular in Army circles.

Dr. Thomas W. Ross, with offices in the Selling building, has been requisitioned by Surgeon-General Blue, of the Public Health Service, and ordered to proceed to Camp Sheridan, Chillicothe, O., where he will be connected with sanitation in that district. Years ago the Public Health Service was known as the Marine Hospital and Quarantine Service, but a recent act of Congress changed the title.

Dr. Ross is a graduate of the University of Oregon Medical School and took a post-graduate course in Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York. He is a specialist in venereal and skin diseases.

J. M. Agee, steward at the Hotel Portland since July, has joined the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation and sailed Thursday for Honolulu as chief steward of the new Portland-built steamship "Anoka." Mr. Agee began as a dishwasher when a young boy in an Eastern hotel. He was for five years steward on the Ward Steamship line out of New York, and for 18 years he was steward on the Northern Michigan Transportation Company line, from which position he came to Portland.

George F. Hastings, of the 16th Company, Fifth Regiment of the U. S. M. C., who was gassed and wounded recently in France, is a 23-year-old Portland boy. He is the son of Mrs. Mary Davis, who resides at Tremont station, Mount Scott. He entered the service in 1916.

Mrs. H. P. Jeannot, of this city, has received word from her son, Fred D. Jeannot, saying that he was in a hospital in England, where he is expected to undergo an operation for varicose veins. He then hoped to be able to go into active service in France. Fred Jeannot enlisted with the 15th Aero Squadron, at Vancouver Barracks, last November, and has been studying gunnery in the U. S. air service in England for the past eight months.

J. A. Stages, of Oregon City, is in receipt of a letter written by Private Donald Vowles, a former Oregon City young man, who left a year ago last July to enlist in the Canadian army. He was born and reared in London, his mother having emigrated from Oregon City. His father later died in America. The young man enlisted in the Canadian army when reserves were called for. He was for five years an employee of the Oregon City Woolen Mills, and his star appears on the service flag of that company.

Ward Holcomb, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Holcomb, of Mount Tabor, has received a commission and has been appointed as an instructor in the training school in France. He had four years' continuous service, being with the troops two years before they were ordered to the Mexican border. When the troops were sent overseas he was with them as a Sergeant. His long experience and capability as an instructor in fundamentals has kept him in the front-line trenches.

Private Elmer C. Douglas is with Battery B, of the 147th Regiment of the Field Artillery in France. Part of a letter to his sister, Mrs. Ella Knight, of 546 Clay street, are given here: "See, we surely have got the Hunns on the run now. I don't know whether they will ever stop or not. The prisoners come in like droves of sheep, and most of them have smiles on their faces. They don't seem to like standing up in front of the Americans. Battery B is doing her little bit. Our battery and regiment has a good reputation and on several occasions have received some flattering remarks from high-rank French officers. I hear that some of the boys in our battery are to receive the Iron Cross and the regiment the Saxon Cross."

Mrs. A. Spellman has just returned from New York City, where she spent two months visiting her relatives and three sons, Joseph, Jack and William, in the United States Navy. It was Mrs. Spellman's intention to see her sons before they were sent across, but two of them have been stationed in the United States for land duty. Jack Spellman is now at Newport, R. I., and William Spellman is at Camp May, N. C. Joseph Spellman expects soon to go to Princeton to take an assistant paymaster's course.

Mrs. J. P. Studholme, of 667 Summer street, in a letter from her son, Sergeant John D. Studholme, has received a picture of American soldiers landing in France. Part of the letter reads as follows: "It was a slow trip and the accommodations were not exactly of the best, but the fact that we landed safely balanced that. I guess. All the details will have to keep until after the war, much as I'd like to give you them. Naturally, there were many amusing instances. One evening while we were all on deck I heard some fellow say: 'Well, boys, I'm insured for $5000, but I'd sell out pretty cheap right now.' I believe that 80 per cent of them had never seen the sea before. They were all and never looked better than on that foggy morning when I woke up and saw the coast of France."

Homer Morgan, in France with Company C, of the 127th Infantry, has been severely wounded, according to a telegram received by his grandmother, Mrs. B. F. Davey. This is the second time that he has been wounded since September 1. In July he was wounded in the battle of Chateau Thierry. Part of a letter dated August 8 is given here: "I have not had time to write much lately on account of moving so much. I was surely after the Germans until I was wounded. I went over the top six times and will soon be ready to go over some more. I got 16 that I know of, and they won't go to the hospital, either."

Private H. Rayburn is in France with Company A, of the 170th Military Police. Part of a letter written home recently are given here: "I am resting now behind the lines, after being in the battles of Chateau Thierry, Aisne and Soissons. I have had several close calls from shells. "The only time I got a shock was when I was making my way to a big shell hole, when the shrapnel sang too close for comfort. The whine of a big shell made me dive for a shallow trench. Consequently, I lit on a dead German. It did not take me many minutes to wiggle to better shelter. I do not know why it bothers me, because I have seen hundreds of dead men."

The U. S. S. San Diego. She was a wreck all battered, with a hole torn in her side. No more shall she sail the rolling sea, no more the storms to ride. For far below the surface and upon the ocean's floor Lies the good ship, San Diego twelve miles off Fire Island's shore.

She went to her low and watery grave on the nineteenth of July. While the seas were calm as calm could be. He bemoaned her fate and called her name. Like a crippled bird she seemed to try to right herself again, and our attempts to save her were in vain.

She was splintered from her old six-inch and her colors flying still. Her crew was calm and faced their task with firm determined will. And not a man was seen to cringe when death looked him in the face. And each man knew his battle form, and they found them in their place.

The captain's voice from the bridge rang and it sounded clear and free: "Abandon ship," and calmly they leaped into the sea. A rousing cheer rose from the crew as the ship rolled on her side. With another heave her mighty keel wag turned toward the sky.

As gracefully she sank beneath the Atlantic's mighty waves. Six of our mates we had learned to love so well. They gave their lives for the U. S. A. and bravely did they die. Perhaps they man Saint Peter's Yacht up there in the clear, blue sky.

We had learned to love that dear old ship, and hated to see her go. But Sherman said that "War is Hell," and I guess I ought to know. But revenge is sweet and all her crew have sworn by Old Glory's pride. To avenge the sinking of our ship and shipmates that died.

PORTLAND OFFICER DIES IN TEXAS FOLLOWING SERVICE IN FRANCE.

Captain Don R. Cather, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Cather have received a telegram announcing the death of their son, Captain Don R. Cather, at El Paso, Tex., October 23. Captain Cather was formerly an engineer with the United States Reclamation Service and was commissioned as a Lieutenant in June, 1917. Within a few months he was promoted to Captain. He was sent to France and served there until recalled to the United States to serve as instructor.

POLK YOUTHS WILL TRAIN

Six Soldiers Are Sent to Fort Stevens for Service.

DALLAS, Or., Oct. 26.—(Special)—The Polk County draft board received word last week from the War Department to call eight more men from Class 1 for general military service. Two men, Clinton Tom, of Grand Ronde, and Charles D. Ferguson, of this city, were sent to Fort McArthur, Cal., and the following will be sent to Fort Stevens; Fred W. Moore, Salem; Roy Neville Preifer, Portland; George Van Santon, Salem, R. F. D. No. 1; Harry Lloyd Heffley, Independence. Two more men will be called at a later date.

Moscow Nurses Respond.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Oct. 25.—(Special)—Moscow people are responding freely to the call for nurses and help and supplies for the soldiers in the S. A. T. C. and the vocational training corps. The soldiers arrived more rapidly than their supplies and bedding. As a result some of them had to sleep on the floors of the barracks for a few nights until conditions became known, the cuts having failed to arrive owing to delay in shipment. When the need of these became known the Belgian relief committee took the matter up and secured about 100 beds for the men. Moscow women responded to the call and gave bedding.
