their stock of ideas as to the form that should be taken by the memorial to Orogon's sons in service. A wealth of suggestive material is still pouring in at the office of Frank J. Lonergan, secretary of the committee that will formulate the type of memorial. While the memorial hospital or memorial hall idea seems to be well in the lead in the mass of suggestions, many still are found to favor the highway and the arch, while new and varied suggestions still find their way to the committee. A meeting of the 15 members of the suggestion committee, which is headed by Will Moore, col-lector of customs, is expected very 500D.

Memorial Stadium Proposed.

A memorial stadium in one of the natural amphithesitors of the hills facing Portland is among the fresh sugges-tions made to the committee. A sketch showing the until a state of the stat tions made to the committee. A sketch showing the outlines of the proposed building accompanied the suggestion, which was made by E. S. Reynolds, cartoonist on The Oregonian. "In this stadium, which would seat 50,000 persons, would be staged open-air games of the youth and annual games," writes Mr. Reynolds in sup-port of his idea. "The roof would be of glass and steel, supported by columns of marble. In this the veterans would hold their reunions, festivals and enhold their reunions, festivals and en-campments. A part of the building could be made into a museum. Separate niches for each county could be con-structed."

Triumphal Arch Wanted.

An arch, representative of the spirit of triumph, with emblems and the alle-of triumph, with emblems and the alle-gorical figure of Uncle Sam, would best commemorate the soldlers' mem-ory, according to T. C. Tenneson. A highway leading from Portland to the point where the graves of the Ore-gon soldiers are to be placed is the idea advanced by the auxiliary to the Medi-cal Corps of the 162d Infantry, as out-lined by Margaret Seabrook, secretary. Bordered with walnut trees, the nuts Bordered with walnut trees, the nuts of which would be gathered by Boy Scouts and the proceeds used to main-tain the roadway, the highway would represent Oregon enterprise. Financing of a steamship company, followed by presentation of a share of stock to each returning soldier is the stock to each returning soldier, is the plan of S. P. Murdock.

Change in Festival Advised.

The citizens' advisory budget commit-tee indorses a plan which would change the Rose Fastival into an Oregon-Amer-icanization festival, representing the icanization festival, representing the spirit of public interest and achive-ment throughout the state. Health, housing, recreation, highways and schools would be represented at such an exposition, it is proposed. David F. Morrison, editorial writer on the Telegram, favors a memorial building. Serving the patriotic sentiment of the state, it should be used for the G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans and other similar organizations, he says. Records of the state's share in the war, together with war railes, should be collected in the memorial building, he says. Of a classical and beautiful architecture, the building would have four splandld facades, an ornamental arch and bronze panels naming each man who had made the supreme sacri-fice.

An effort is being made to have the tags reach the automobile owners as near the first of the year as possible. Efforts also are being made to dodge the Christmas mail, because of the congestion and danger of crushing Christmas packages by the heavy weight of the license tags. Mr. Olcott said about 15,000 had registered up to tonight, leaving over 40,000 to be heard from, with but a week left for applica-tions to come in. come in.

Great congestion is expected in the department during the automobile coming week.

Bell, proprietor of the Imperial Hotal, was struck by an automobile and was struck by an automobile and thrown to the payement and seriously injured. As the 6:12 electric train for Portland was approaching, Mr. Bell started to cross the street from the hotel to the passenger station, and when nearing the opposite side he was struck by a Ford driven by Hans Nelson, of Newberg. His head struck a rail, resulting th a bad scalp wound and a possible fracture of the skuil. It is thought he will recover.
