

HOUSE SAVES WOOD AND SENATE TALKS

Upper Chamber Torn Over International Questions.

of helpless Chinese to Japan. And then, perhaps, the settlement of Plume's fate will be declared by the senate to be a question for self-determination by the peoples affected.

The announcement of Senators Lodge and Borah that they had seen the full text of the peace treaty in New York produced an almost riotous effect on the senate. Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska displayed such emotion as has not been witnessed in the senate in a long time. He seemed to sense a high crime, but the speaker was impressed that in Senator Hitchcock's estimation the crime was in the peace treaty's having been exhibited to somebody else before he had seen it.

Distress Held Justified. And gossip has it that Senator Hitchcock has good reason to feel slighted. He has led the administration's fight in the senate for the league of nations, and private individuals have been permitted to see the treaty draft before it has been offered to him.

This leak, like many that have characterized the course of this administration, is laid to some of Mr. Wilson's advisers. The gossip is that one copy of the peace treaty was sent back from Paris or Versailles by a distinguished member of the American commission to a friend in New York to scrutinize and dissect. At least three others are said to have fallen in some manner into the hands of other equally good friends, and from friends they may have passed into the hands of enemies, such as Senators Lodge and Borah.

Additional copies are said to be on the way from Germany and Norway, one dispatch saying that the German government had sent copies of the treaty to all members of congress.

Rumors Are Doing Harm.

Even the advocates of the league of nations undoubtedly feel now that it would be well to lay the full treaty before the senate without delay, because rumors are going abroad which are doing much harm. The league cause is being hurt by rumors which may not be true, and so long as the truth is unrevealed, other new and more dangerous rumors will arise that cannot be overcome after the public prejudices are once set in motion.

One rumor that is doing particular harm relates to the labor section of the treaty. Labor is hearing that the plan is one which calls for the leveling of labor standards throughout the world, through which it is declared American industrial workers will suffer by reason of their having to compete with the best of living, the best working conditions and the best scale of wages.

Bad Complications Possible.

Other reports have it that there is so much in the treaty calling for legislation by congress as to involve the house of representatives. Members of the house are stirred by some of the reports regarding the treaty, as well as by demands from their constituents that they take a hand in seeing that the treaty contains this or that or is rejected. These constituents, of course, do not understand the treaty, and are misled by the senate, but there are possibilities for many complications in this nagging at members of the house.

The house has had on many occasions in the history of this country asserted its right to participate in treaty making and in 1899 called on the executive for correction of the treaty with the Prussian treaty which was then up for ratification in the senate. The correspondence was furnished.

League Overshadows All.

So absorbing has been the interest in the league of nations developments in the senate that Washington almost forgot within a few hours the attempt to blow up the home of Attorney-General Palmer. The question has been the passage of the resolution to submit the woman's suffrage amendment to the states. The attempt to assassinate the attorney-general did not create the keenest excitement because it was generally felt that the leniency with which the treaty question has been dealing with radicals of all descriptions was sure to lead to serious outbreaks. When it was found that the dynamite came from outside Washington and that he was just an ordinary anarchist all interest was lost.

Important Probes Ordered.

Besides passing the agricultural appropriation bill, it has passed the resolution creating a committee to investigate the entire management of the war, both as it relates to preparations in this country and on the battle lines in France. Another resolution provides for an investigation of the shipping board from top to bottom and at every port where a ship was built for or floated by the government.

Wood Sentiment Growing.

Presidential politics in Washington at this time deals with only two names, General Wood and the republican candidate, and the democrats talk no longer of anybody but Wilson. The situation as to General Wood is remarkable in that the politicians largely seem to have surrendered to the belief that he will be the republican nominee next year. The demand for Wood, it is frankly admitted, comes from the rank and file and the develop-

GRAND-DAUGHTER OF OFFICER WHO BUILT NAVY SHIPS IN REVOLUTIONARY WAR CHRISTENS ASTORIA VESSEL.

Mrs. H. W. Meyers.

The launching of the Wonnabe at the plant of Geo. F. Rodgers & Co., at Astoria, brings out the fact her sponsor, Mrs. H. W. Meyers of Salem, comes from a prominent American maritime family of the post-revolutionary war period, which helped to build and man some of the famous ships of that historic time. Her great-grandfather, Josiah Barker, as a young man, served in the frigate La Hague, in the war of the revolution. Later, as United States naval constructor, he built the U. S. sloop of war, Frolic, which was captured by the British frigate Orpheus off Matanzas, in the war of 1812. After her memorable and gallant career in the war of 1812, he rebuilt the famous old sea-fighter, Constitution, for years the pride of the American navy. In 1843 he planned and constructed the Portsmouth and so well was she built that for more than 60 years she remained in the service of the United States navy. His son, Seth Barker, who could not resist the lure of the sea, followed in his father's footsteps and Mrs. Meyers, in breaking the bottle on the modern Wonnabe, can be said to have done her share in keeping up the maritime tradition of the family.

ROSES SENT TO SHRINERS

12,000 BUDS DISPATCHED IN 15 LARGE BOXES.

Crippled Woman in Indianapolis Receives Gift of Blooms From Portland.

Twelve thousand rosebuds, the majority of them Caroline Testouts, left Portland last evening for Indianapolis and the Shrine convention. They are to help Portland's claims to the 1920 Shriner's convention. The roses were packed in 15 large boxes.

While the roses are being sent primarily in the cause of the 1920 Shriner's convention for Portland, they will also perform a mission of altruism. Mrs. G. J. Frankel, acting police matron, who as head of the Portland Women's Federated club superintended the gathering of a large share of the rosebuds, knows of a crippled woman living in Indianapolis. Because of her infirmity this woman has never been able to come to Portland and see the roses about which she has heard so much.

Her name and address were telegraphed yesterday afternoon to W. J. Hofmann, illustrious potentate of Portland's Al Kader temple, with the instructions for a group of Portland Shriners to go in uniform and present to her a number of Portland's official roses.

It was originally planned to send but 10,000 roses to Indianapolis. This number was supplied by the Portland park board alone. An extra 2000 were culled from gardens of members of the women's federated clubs.

INFIDELITY CHARGES MADE

Wife Says Husband Visited Another Woman; Divorce Asked.

Lillian M. Conrad kept an enlarged photograph of another man on the parlor table in their home, complains Anthony R. Conrad in a suit for divorce filed yesterday, and finally left her husband March 8, 1918, with the announcement that she "had never loved him and only married him out of spite."

Bessie J. Sward complains that E. D. Sward after joining the navy at Bremerton in August, 1917, made infrequent visits to Portland and upon coming to this city called on another young woman instead of his wife and child.

Other divorce actions filed yesterday were: Crystal Evelyn Welch against Orme D. Welch, desertion; Eva F. Ross against C. W. Ross, cruelty; and Margaret Valentine against Frank Valentine, desertion.

GUESTS NEED 6000 ROOMS

HOUSING BUREAU DEMANDS ACTIONS BY CITIZENS.

Reputation of Portland Endangered if Householders Refuse Aid in Emergency.

Unless 6000 rooms in private Portland homes are listed before Tuesday night at the housing bureau in Liberty temple the Victory Rose Festival will not be a success.

Such was the announcement made yesterday by Ira L. Riggs, president of the Victory Rose Festival board of directors. The Liberty temple will be kept open all today that rooms may be listed. The housing bureau has been reached by calling Main 313 by those who cannot personally call at the bureau. Less than 1000 rooms have as yet been listed. Within the last week more than 2500 applications for reservations during the Ad club convention and the Victory Rose Festival have been received by Portland hotels, already overcrowded. Some hotel men estimate that 10,000 rooms in private homes will be necessary if out-of-town visitors are fully accommodated.

Julius Meier has declared his willingness to co-operate in the emergency. "My home is not large, but our spare bedroom will be occupied by a Victory Rose Festival guest," he declared yesterday. "Very few Portland business men are anxious to make money by taking in roomers, but nearly every business man of this city is eager to increase the good reputation of Portland. This city has a reputation for hospitality and it must be sustained."

The same plea for the reputation of Portland was made by Richard W. Childs, manager of the Portland hotel and chairman of the special committee appointed by the Hotel Men's association to co-operate with the housing bureau.

John L. Etheridge has not only turned over to the housing bureau the two upper stories of the building now occupied by the Morris Book bond house, formerly used as a hotel, but has also promised to list one of the bedrooms in his residence. "We have no spare room in our house at the present time," he said, "but this is a time when everybody must sacrifice for the sake of the city."

H. W. Arbury, chairman of the housing bureau, appointed Mrs. Caroline Jones, adjunct of the women's league for national service, and Mrs. Norman Christie of the war camp community service, as a special committee to solicit rooms. The committee began its work Thursday. It has visited small hotels and rooming houses somewhat removed from the business section and has listed every available room.
