

DUST CHAMBERLAIN IS DEMOCRATS' CRY

"Oregon's Senator Must Go," Heard Abroad.

WILSON PETS MADE TARGET

"Worst Offense Yet" Is Attack Few Days Ago on Shipping Board and He Halts at Nothing.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, June 14.—Talk with democratic leaders of the administration variety wherever you may in Washington and they reveal at once their deep feeling of antipathy toward Senator Chamberlain.

Until within the last two weeks there had been a disposition on their part, however, not to oppose Senator Chamberlain's re-election to the senate from Oregon next year, but just now they are feeling differently. He must be beaten in the word they are passing down the line.

Their contention is that a democrat is no longer a democrat who fails to obey the Wilson Chamberlain, or who attacks individuals or agents of the Wilson administration. They cannot understand how a senator's obligations to his constituents might compel him to disobey the orders of the commander-in-chief of the democratic party now and then.

Senator Bolts at Nothing.

It was evidently believed by administration leaders that when the row between Senator Chamberlain and Secretary Baker ended, the Oregon senator would "lay off," but he seems to have mapped out a straight course and he goes right ahead, no matter what individuals or policies of Mr. Wilson may happen to be in his way.

Senator Chamberlain has asserted his independence several times in the last few weeks in a way that nettles his party leaders. He has a way of referring to delicate subjects, as in the case of the recent Philippine hearing before a joint committee of the senate and house. When the Japanese question came up, Senator Chamberlain promptly turned the spotlight on the fact that California was once in a fair way to solve its Japanese problem by the enactment of an alien land law when suddenly the national administration interferred.

One look at the countenances of some of the democratic members of the two committees revealed their resentment of the Oregon senator's boldness.

"Worst Offense" Is Noted.

But Senator Chamberlain's worst offense was committed within the last few days when he intimated a need for making the jurisdiction of shipbuilding from the shipping board to the board is President Wilson's pet agency. When some man clamored for a job, presenting a statement of facts with blueprints on all that he had done to help the democratic party and Mr. Wilson, he was usually fixed up with a place in the shipping board.

The president's regard for Edward N. Hurley, the chairman of the board, is almost equal to his affection for Newton D. Baker, secretary, of whom Senator Chamberlain has so constantly made his target for the last year and a half. When the matter of formulating a new shipping policy was under consideration in meeting of the commerce committee of the senate, Senator Chamberlain spoke of curtailing the shipping board's authority as "no unmixt evil." Such a comment on the shipping board is no misdemeanor, in the administration eye; it is a crime.

And Senator Chamberlain did not stop at that. He listened in the senate to the message of President Wilson to Senator Hitchcock, saying that it was "highly undesirable to communicate" the text of the peace treaty to the country, then voted to print the full text of the treaty. In voting to print the treaty he said:

No Apology Is Made.

"I make no apology for my vote and shall not make any for it in the senate of the United States or elsewhere upon this or any other proposition involving the welfare of my country. I vote as my conscience dictates rather than as someone would have me vote.

Personally, I think it is very unfortunate that the discussion of the matter has fallen into and along political lines. But it has. There is no use to close our eyes to the fact that pretty generally the republicans are in opposition to the treaty, while democrats, without knowing what is in it, are supporting it, probably as an administration measure.

"I am sorry, Mr. President, that I cannot accept everything that comes to us as an administration measure. I hope I may be able to support the league of nations and the treaty of peace, but I shall determine my duty for myself when the whole and completed document is submitted here.

The welfare of our country, the fate of nations and of civilization itself, may be involved in what we are doing, and everything ought to be done with deliberation and the deepest sense of responsibility."

COMEDY AT "OAKS" BREEZY

MEMBERS OF THE ARMSTRONG COMEDY CO. PROMISE TREAT.

Plot Is Adventures of Barnstorming Theatrical Troupe Stranded in Small Country Town.

"Hiram," breezy rural comedy with city trimmings, is the bill in which members of the act of the Armstrong Folly company will literally "shine" before audiences at the Oaks amusement park throughout the week, beginning today.

Working all that rare comedy elements induced even by the most commonplace situations into a stage setting that will be distinguished as one of the most elaborate yet seen here and with costume and lighting effects to lend more charm, "Hiram" promises to be a comedy delight and a musical treat.

Of course, there is Trixie, the coquettish actress, to beguile the village youth, and there is the barnstorming theatrical troupe stranded in the small town and dependent upon the good graces of Uncle Josh for its fare. Then comes Hiram, Uncle Josh's "hired help," who stirs up a great portion of merriment by falling madly in love with the actress, represented by the charming Periqueta Courtney, leading lady of the Armstrong company. The climax of the theme is the marriage of Trixie and her rural lover, following a betrothal barn dance that is a topsy-turvy novelty. An unusual feature will be the "personal presence" on the stage of live farm stock to lend greater realism to the stage setting.

Features attending the presentation of "Hiram" will be the famous comedy song, "How Ya Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm," sung by Howard Evans and his dainty partner; Grace

DRUG EVIL HELD GROWING

ADDICTS IN CITY REPORTED TO NUMBER 800.

Extension of Vice Among Young Men and Women of City Said to Be Actively Under Way.

Forty drug addicts appeared for trial in the municipal court last week in the course of a clean-up campaign initiated by Inspector Swennes and Deputy City Attorney Norton. Police say there are 300 drug users in the city, and that they are constantly inducing young men and women to begin using drugs.

Mr. Norton says the federal law permits addicts who have been using drugs three years to purchase 93 grains a week on a physician's prescription. It is alleged that many drug users get along with about half their allowance and sell the rest to younger ones at exorbitant prices.

Police recently learned of a Chinaman who had taught the habit to several young white girls. In return for drugs which he furnished them, the girls practically became his slaves. Municipal Judge Rossman imposed a heavy jail sentence on the Chinaman.

One of the heaviest sentences ever imposed by the municipal court was given yesterday to John Anderson, who had been arrested on a charge of teaching the drug habit to Mrs. John Sequin, 20-year-old wife of one of Anderson's friends. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Sequin, and another woman were arrested last spring. Anderson got off with a suspended sentence of six months in jail and a $500 fine, also suspended, on condition that he leave the city. Sequin is in the county jail serving his sentence. The girls were released.

Thursday Inspector Swennes arrested Anderson and Mrs. Sequin in a hotel, where the woman said Anderson had
