

SENATE IS NEAR END OF BIG PROGRAMME

Democrats Promise Filibuster if Knox Resolution Is Raised

ALL POLITICS SET ASIDE

Sectional Battle in Congress Over Big Measures of Reconstruction Is Forecast.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, June 21.—When congress convened in extra session one month ago it was said that legislative machinery had never been controlled which would put through the six big left-over supply bills in time to provide money for the running expenses of the government in the new fiscal year beginning July 1.

In exactly 40 working days the house of representatives has passed all of the half dozen supply bills, besides finding time to initiate other important legislation. At the same time the senate is disposing of bills passed by the house and will, by holding night sessions through next week, have all of the appropriation legislation ready for the president's signature before July 1.

Only a filibuster by democratic senators will prevent the completion of this huge legislative programme in time to keep the wheels of the government going. A threat has been made by administration democrats in the senate to filibuster and stop all appropriation bills if an effort is made to obtain a vote on the Knox resolution.

Blockade Not Wanted.

Some of the republican leaders favor abandoning the announced intention of trying to have a vote on the Knox resolution Monday, as is declared to be the intention. The first desire of several republican leaders is to make available all of the money necessary to run the government next year. For this reason they hesitate to have any question considered that will bring a democratic blockade. The Knox resolution will not pass if brought to a vote. That much can be said positively now and the real purpose of its advocates appears to be to obtain a division which will be a warning to the American delegation at the peace conference regarding the temper of the senate.

Prohibition Fight Angered.

A report today that President Wilson will lift the ban on wine and beer on next Wednesday by declaring that demobilization has proceeded to such a point that the safeguards provided by the law are no longer necessary augurs wild times in congress in the next few days. Efforts were being made today by "dries" in congress to verify this report, and it is expected that Washington may look for such demonstrations next week as it has not witnessed for a long spell.

Prohibitionists will demand, it was said today, that congress act at once to remove all the powers held by the president relative to wartime prohibition. Some of the "dries" declared today that this can not be done because several democrats who at other times are prohibitionists, and particularly those democrats from the south, will resist such a measure as expressed in the words of the president by congress. "It must be remembered," said an active leader in the "wet" fight, "that southerners are democrats first and prohibitionists afterward."

Wilson Declared Influenced.

There is perhaps a weakening of prohibition prospects by some democrats in congress because of the belief that their party leader, who has changed his mind on the liquor question since spending so much time in the great cases of France. Not enough members, however, have so influenced as to give any hope of the rejuvenation of John Barleycorn.

That a well-organized and highly paid propaganda being carried on in the east against the Mondell soldiers settlement bill was developed by Representative Sinnott of Oregon at the hearings on the measure before the house public lands committee of which he is chairman.

For two weeks Representative Sinnott tried to apprehend the individuals or organizations responsible for press propaganda put out against the bill in the name of the National Guard, reflecting on the house public lands committee as well as upon the purposes of the bill.

Promoter Admits Propaganda.

The desired information came when Mrs. Haviland Lund, head of an organization which is promoting private land projects, admitted before the committee that she was responsible for the misleading publicity matter. She had hired a press agent for $50 to write the matter which was given to the press generally. Mrs. Lund admitted that her interest was her opposition to the government going into competition with the private real estate investors.

A bitter fight is ahead for the soldiers' settlement act, but its defeat does not seem possible, although powerful forces are at work to kill it. In addition to such private real estate interests opposing it, there are a number of small one or two-man organizations in Washington who call themselves the representatives of the farmers of the nation. These organizations probably have little or no following but they can make considerable noise, so much in fact, that they seem to grow fat on the profits of "farming the farmers" as Representative Mondell has characterized their operations.

War Expense Audit to Begin.

The audit of $14,800,000,000 of war expenditures, which is being conducted by the Graham committee of the house Monday, which after a few meetings of the whole committee in this city will throw sub-committees into every part of the United States and send one to Europe.

The repeal of the daylight saving law by the house during the week ends a question of which it might be said using a favorite phrase of the late and unimpaired Senator Allison, "there was good argument on both sides." Republicans and democrats of both senate and house are glad that it is all over because the arguments presented by the rural population against the bill, on the one hand, and of the shop girls in the congested industrial centers, on the other, impressed members of congress deeply. The farmers won.

Burlison's Action Timely.

As a harmonizing force Postmaster-General Burlison is demonstrating himself the wizard of his time in the turning back of the telegraph and telephone wires by the house this week without a dissenting vote. This remarkable outcome can only be attributed to the unanimous conviction of both republicans and democrats that the country's systems of communication must be freed from the hand of Burlison. Humanitarian legislation is receiving serious consideration from this congress as shown by favorable reports by the house committee on education during the week on two bills, one to amend the act for the vocational rehabilitation of the soldier and another providing additional aid for printing for the blind. The senate is expected to pass the Kenyon bill within a day or two, which provides for the rehabilitation of men and women injured in the industrial occupations or on the farm by teaching them occupations with which their interests will not interfere.

A distinct lull marks the situation as to the Presidential contest next year. Republicans are inclined to hold up the discussion of their presidential political politics until time is given to show the country the accomplishments of the new republican congress. In other words, the republicans are putting business ahead of politics. General Leonard Wood is still holding the prominence gained several weeks ago as a republican presidential possibility and the only activity now in behalf of any other candidacy is that shown by the friends of Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California.

An insight into what the democrats have on their minds as to next year's contest has been gained during the week. There are now two democratic candidates which will become active any moment it is determined that President Wilson will not seek to succeed himself. The first is Governor James M. Cox of Ohio, whose boom already has considerable organization behind it, and the other is A. Mitchell Palmer, the present attorney-general. Mr. Palmer's friends say that the attempt to blow up his home a few weeks ago have blown him into great prominence in the public mind.

Just now Mr. Palmer's time is all occupied in explaining some things in connection with his former office as alien property custodian. He is further hampered in his political ambitions by the story so often published and never denied that he declined the appointment as secretary of war at the opening of Mr. Wilson's first administration because he was a conscientious objector to war. Those who had to go to the front and fight are not apt to take kindly to candidates who were conscientious objectors at any time.

The status of the league of nations proposal in the senate has not changed except for the case of Senator Thomas of Colorado who made his escape from anti-league to pro-league during the week in full view of the senate audience. The transfiguration of Senator Thomas' fortune in his absence for several weeks, dating from the time that he appeared in public opposition to the league of nations with Senators Borah and Reed in eastern cities a few weeks ago, Senator Thomas has to face the voters of Colorado again next year and is suspected of having trouble in his coming campaign should he persist in his opposition to the league.

With all appropriation bills out of the way the real battle in congress will begin over the big measures of reconstruction in which the division will be more often sectional than partisan.

SUN SET LATE LAST NIGHT
LONGEST DAY AND DAYLIGHT SAVING RESPONSIBLE.

When Old Sol Quit at 9 P. M. He Had Worked 16 Hours Since Morning.

Persons who like the daylight and dote on sunshine got both longer and later yesterday evening than they will get again for another twelve months, and possibly longer and later than they will get them until another world emergency brings the necessity for daylight saving.

Yesterday was the longest day of the year. The sun was up earlier and set later than it has on any day in the past twelve months, and because of the fact that all have their clocks ahead an hour the setting was an hour later than the old reliable almanac figured on. Of course, it was up an hour later than the almanac said it would be, but even at that the rising was so early that few were awake to care about it, while all enjoyed the glorious setting almost as an after-theater diversion.

However, everything ran true to form and yesterday followed official schedule, which was sun up at 5:19 A. M., sun down at 9:05 P. M., making 15 hours and 46 minutes of sunshine.

ENGINEER FOOLS BANDITS
ATTEMPTED ROBBERY NEAR LIMA, OHIO, BALKED.
Bandits Forced to Abandon Effort When Engineer Starts His Train Suddenly.

CINCINNATI, June 21.—The engineer on Baltimore & Ohio train No. 57, Detroit to Cincinnati, foiled an attempted train robbery near Lima, O., early today, the train crew and passengers reported on their arrival here.

The train was preparing to take a siding near Lima to allow train No. 53 to pass. Four men who were in hiding crept out and uncoupled the train from the locomotive, but failed to notice the fact that the engineer had started the train. The engineer put on steam enough to give the train a jerk, the chain standing the pull.

The train crew, knowing that No. 53 had not passed, rushed out of the train when it began to move and drove off the bandits with revolvers.
