Yanks Preferred 'Earthy Hell' to Surrender, Says Logger.

MEN LONG WITHOUT FOOD

W. H. Williamson of Astoria Reports Many Soldiers Blown to Pieces in Attempt to Quench Thirst.

ASTORIA, Or., July 12.—(Special.)—He is home from an "earthy hell" thankful to be alive, but still suffering from the effects of a gas attack. William H. Williamson, formerly a scaler for the Big Creek Logging company, reached Astoria yesterday. He was a member of the 308th infantry, the celebrated "lost battalion," which participated in the fierce fighting in the Argonne forest. Williamson was severely gassed, losing power of speech for four months. Since his return to America in March he has been under treatment at the Letterman hospital in San Francisco and at Fort Whipple. After a 30-day furlough he will return to Fort Whipple.

Williamson gave a graphic story of the terrible five days spent in the Argonne forest. It was on the 23 of October, 1918, that the first battalion of the 308th infantry, with detachments from the 307th infantry and the 306th machine gun battalion, joined in the general assault. The first battalion which was commanded by "Go-to-Hell" Whittlesey, advanced into the enemy lines and gained its objective point late that afternoon.

Americans Refuse to Surrender.

By the following morning the battalion was completely surrounded by the enemy and entirely cut off from communication with American support. The Americans were in a ravine, with the Germans on the banks above, and the lines were so close the commands of the Hun officers could easily be heard. During the following five days the Yankees held that position and for the last three days they were without food. Water could be obtained only from one muddy spring, which was so exposed it was continually raked by the German fire, and to approach it was almost a suicidal enterprise, as said Williamson. On the morning of the fifth day the German commander sent a message to Major Whittlesey by an American prisoner, demanding his "surrender for humanity's sake." The American officer dispatched a negative reply. The 307th regiment fought its way through the German cordon and rescued what was left of the famous battalion.

C. S. Runners Killed.

Commenting on his experience in that fight, Williamson said: "I belonged to Company L, third battalion of the 308th, and on the opening day of the battle was dispatched to the German line to see to it that reinforcements were coming. When I reached Whittlesey's command the German machine gunners were firing, and every runner they had sent out either had been killed or captured. We were completely surrounded and started to dig in, but this was slow work, as the bottom of the ravine was gravel and hardpan, while the ground above was continually sliding in upon us."

Death, Wounded Cover Ground.

"For a time the trees and underbrush provided some shelter, but the constant rain of grenades, shrapnel and bombs dropped from airplanes soon cleared away the shelter and played havoc among the troops, until the ground was literally covered with dead and wounded. We could do little for the injured, as the supply of bandages was soon exhausted, but the boys emptied their packs and did the best they could to relieve the sufferings of their companions. The cries of the wounded for water were heart-rending and it was only by threats of using the bayonet that we could prevent some of the poor lads from dragging themselves to the spring—a thing that would have meant instant death from the Hun snipers."

Bursting Shells Kill Wounded.

"In many instances the wounded were blown to pieces by the bursting shells as they lay in the open and around the spring lay a thick cordon of dead bodies all that was left of those who tried to get a little water for themselves or to appease the thirst of their stricken comrades. Finally the spring itself was blown up and then the only water available was that scooped from the muddy ground. After the second day there was no food, all the boys which the boys had in their packs being exhausted. Airplanes tried to throw us food and ammunition, but each time the coveted packages dropped into the Hun lines."

"How many attacks were repulsed I don't know, but there was almost continuous fighting night and day without a moment's rest and with nothing to eat and little to drink. Still, the boys kept up their grit, determined to fight to the death, if necessary, rather than surrender. But relief finally came and the terrific strain was over."

Hood River Dealer Says Federal Estimate Is Excessive.

HOOD RIVER, Or., July 12.—(Special.)—After conferences with buyers who have recently visited other districts and with shipping men of Washington sections, C. W. McCullagh, sales manager of the Apple Growers' association, is convinced that government estimates of the northwestern apple crop are excessive.

While the government placed the Hood River valley tonnage at 2,300,000 to 2,500,000 boxes, present estimates have been cut to 1,500,000 to 1,600,000 boxes.

EX-KING OF GREECE BELIEVES IN LEAGUE

OWN COUNTRY DISCUSSED

Lack of Popularity Will Defeat Venizelos in Opinion of Man Who Still Hopes for Throne.

BY HERBERT HAROLD SWOPE. (Copyright by the New York World. Published by arrangement.)

LUCERNE, July 12.—(Special Cable.)—"I do not believe in the divine right of kings. But the ex-king and the ex-emperor Charles believed in this theory, as they often told me during numerous conversations," said ex-King Constantine of Greece to the American correspondents today, who are at present visiting Switzerland under the auspices of the Swiss government. When asked his opinion on the League of nations, Constantine said: "I think the league of nations will bring about permanent peace if secret treaties are done away with."

His remarks about the country he formerly ruled were brief but bitter in regard to Premier Venizelos. "I don't think the elections which are to be held in Greece this fall will be fair, for I fear force will be employed," he said. "Furthermore I don't think Venizelos will be elected because he is not too popular with the people."

Though he made no mention of the fact, persons in his suite, well acquainted with his private life, stated that he still has hopes of regaining the throne.

Informed by one of the correspondents present that an American journalist had sent him a letter warning him of the approach of the Greek revolution, Constantine replied: "I refused to see the correspondent because he did not respect himself according to court etiquette and the warning never reached me."

The former king and his suite appear comparatively happy in their "neutral" surroundings, although Constantine clearly shows signs of worry and fatigue. His hair has become whiter, although well in health, his features are drawn. He appears to be extremely nervous.

He was surprised at the news that his brother-in-law was to be tried by an allied tribunal, perhaps under the impression that such might be his fate. He made no mention of his son, who now rules in his place, and seemed come to an end, possibly being afraid it would turn to a political debate on Greece.

ELEVATOR HELD UNSAFE

Electrically Controlled Lift for City Hall Recommended.

Replacement of the old hydraulic elevator in the city hall by an electrically-controlled lift is recommended to the city council in a report submitted yesterday by City Building Inspector Plummer.

The present elevator, according to Mr. Plummer and other experts who have but recently inspected it, is not unsafe, although a shaft on one of the traveling shafts and the stationary shafts are worn and must be replaced within a comparatively short time.

Mr. Plummer directs attention to the cost of maintaining a steam plant in the city hall at high pressure to operate a pump which provides the pressure for the operation of the present elevator. Through the operation of an electric elevator, Mr. Plummer says, that heat can be purchased from a private company and thus entirely eliminate the operation of the steam plant.
