GALLANT OFFICER IS HERE TO TAKE POST

Lieutenant-Colonel Sloan Commended by Pershing.

CITATION WON IN ARGONNE

New Executive Officer of Portland Recruiting Station Has Record

for Accomplishments,

Cited by General Pershing for exceptional gallantry in time of battle; Sis.21 is demanded from the Standard amount in France, most of which was spent in actual fighting in the front-line trenches; severely burned by German mustard gas and almost continuous promotion through the various grades to the rank of lieutenant-colonel are among the war experiences of Frank A. Sloan, recently transferred to Frank a severuive officer of the general army recruiting station, succeeding Colonel Bennett, who was ordered to France.

The story of Colonel Sloan reads

dered to France.

The story of Colonel Sloan reads
like one of the novels of a favorite Américan author. One of the youngest officers of his rank in the United States, he is barely 30 and a lieutenantcolonel. He has seen service in all States, he is barely so and a necessar-colonel. He has seen service in all parts of America, has been mentioned as one of the most gallant officers with the American expeditionary forces and has been commended by the commander-in-chief of the American army for his extraordinary valor.

Bridge Built Under Fire. Bridge Built Under Fire.

The particular act of heroism for which he was cited was constructing a bridge across the Mause river under very heavy fire from the enemy, entrenched in foothills on the other aide, and advancing at the head of his battalion to the objective, despite the heavy casualties among his men. The citation, which is signed by General Pershing, reads as follows:

heavy casualties among his men. The citation, which is signed by General Pershing, reads as follows: "For distinguished and exceptional gallantry at Villers-devant-Muzon on November 7, 1918, in the operations of November 7, 1918, in the operations of the American expeditionary forces, in testimony thereof, and as an expression of appreciation of his valor, I award to Major Frank A. Sloan this citation." Colonel Sloan sailed for France in October, 1917, as a captain in the 28th regiment of regulars, 1st division. The division trained behind the lines until January, 1918, when it was transferred to the trenches in the Toul sector. In April he was ordered to Cantigny, and a month later was made a major. Dura month later was made a major. Dur-ing all this time he was in the front-line trenches and took part in the major engagements in the two sectors. With his new rank of major he was again transferred, this time to the 77th divi-sion, attached to the 365th infantry, na-tional army, stationed in the Bacharat

Citation Won in Last Offense.

In the middle of August, while re-pelling a German advance on the Vesle sector, he was seriously burned with the bosche mustard gas. A month and a half later he rejoined his regiment in the Argonne, and took an active part in the last big drive of the war. His division failed to obtain the promised relief, and for weeks they had continual fighting. From November 1 to 7 in the last big push from the Vesle, the regiment fought day and night, steadily advancing with scarcely any rest. It was during this offensive that Colonal Steam required his citation. that Colonel Sloan received his cita-

Late Colonel Rasmussen Praised. At Cantigny, while he was attached the 28th regiment, Colonel Slean to the 25th regiment, Colonel Slean became an intimate friend of Major Rasmussen of Portland. He was near him at the time of his death. Colonel Sloan is high in his praise of the Portland man, and says that he was twice recommended for the Victoria Cross, Britain's greatest honor.

Colonel Sloan, after the signing of the armistice, was stationed at Le Mans, France, on staff duty, and he served for a few days with the army of occupation on temporary assignment.

occupation on temporary assignment. He sailed for New York on May 5, and the United States.

He was commissioned as a second-lieutenant in 1910, following his graduation from St. Johns Military academy, New York, as honor student. He served first in Wyoming and later was transferred to the border as a first lieutenant. In 1914, he was ordered to Honolulu, where he was made captain. It was from Honolulu that he sailed for France in 1917. Colonel Sloan was married a few years ago to the daughter of Frank Keenan, famous actor.

SERVICE MEN TO BE FETED

Veterans and Friends to Make Merry on Council Crest Tuesday Night.

The second of a series of out-door events honoring Portland and Oregon service men will take place Tuesday evening. The War Camp Community Service has made arrangements to take over the entire Council Crest amuse-ment plant and soldiers, sailors and marines, with their friends, will be special guests of hunor. A community sing will be one of the features of the evening. Mrs. Jane Burns Albert will act as director. The affair will open with a pienic supper. Members of the victory chorus and other Portland business and school girls will bring baskets filled with lunches. Dancing will follow the community singing.

munity singing.
The third out-door entertainment for Portland's service men will be held Saturday, when the War Camp Community Service will give a payement dance at Eighteenth street, between Couch and Davis streets. Arrangements already are being made to have a large band play. The first out-door event was a payement dance given July 12 at the same location, when between 7000 and 8000 persons attended.

CONTRACTOR ASKS $20,853

Reimbursement on Bridge Approach Contract Demanded.

England Casualty company and Clarke county, Wash.

The contract involves work on the Derby street approach to the interstate bridge which was handled by Ray on a sub-contract from the Standard American Dredging company which secured the contract for construction of the bridge approaches in 1916. Ray agreed to complete his work, under plans discussed for $18,735, but it cost him $33,658.98 of which only $12,835.77 has been paid, he contends, because of variations from original plans. The suit is brought of Profitable Operation. MARSHFIELD, Or., July 19 .- (Spe MARSHFIELD, Or., July 19.—(Special.)—Reports from various points on the Coquille river and about Coos bay since the opening of the fishing season on July 15 indicate the season, as usual, holds out no promise of profitable operation in its early stages. At Coquille but one boat was drifting and no fish were caught, while on Coos bay only four crews tried their nets, with poor success. A few chinook, of very fine quality, were caught, but they were small and averaged but 15 pounds. Fishermen in general, it was said.

Early Season Holds Out No Promise
